Beat The Down Price Increase

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

The Dining Experience

It's Not The Food, It's Not The Drink, It's The Entertainment

By Dan Rattiner

Going to a restaurant in the Hamptons these days is a very different experience than going to a restaurant in the Hamptons, let's say, fifteen years ago. Fifteen years ago you went to a restaurant and that was the story. They said, would you like this table, would you like that table, you sat down, you ate. You met the owner, you thanked him, you went home, that was that story.

Today, at about ninety percent of the restaurants in the Hamptons, and there are still, thank God, a few hold-overs, which is where I go sometimes, you have to make a reservation usually, six or seven months in advance. You call up in December and say something like, "How's 7:45 on Wednesday, June 8?" And they say, "No, we're busy but we have something available at ten o'clock." And you say, "Fine, I'll take it."

If you bother to go to these restaurants at any other time, of course, you're not likely to get in at all. Usually, there are lines of hungry people standing out front. These are not homeless people, these are millionaires and billionaires who have made reservations, but even with the reservations, they're still waiting for tables. I personally find this a very uncomfortable way to eat. I have not experienced hunger in my life until these new situations arose where you would have to make reservations at all the restaurants out here.

There have been a lot of stories about how to get a reservation at these restaurants, one of them is just to show up and say, "How could you have forgotten about my reservation, I called up about four hours ago or seventeen years ago."

I have found that has worked – actually I haven't done it myself but people tell me it works. One of the best ways of doing things is to make a reservation for Paul Newman, party of five and then you show up and you say I'm Paul Newman. I think there are a number of people around here who

...there are a number of people around here who have had their names changed to be the names of favorite celebrities just so they can eat.

Duboeuf's Greatest Wine Bargains On Sale

In a recent "Tastings" article that appeared in The Wall Street Journal, wine writers Dorothy Gaiter and John Brecher stated: "We've Said Many Times That Beaujolais May Be The Greatest Red Wine Bargain In The World." We couldn't agree more! The delicious reds of Beaujolais and pleasing Chardonnays of The Macon listed here are ample testimony. Each feature the First Prize Label indicating that each wine has won first place at the prestigious, annual Villfranche and Macon wine fairs. Monsieur Duboeuf selected these prize winning cuvees especially for Sherry-Lehmann.

1er Prix Concours Villefranche — 1999 — 1er Prix Concours Villefranche

First Prize Winning Label Reds	BOTTLE	CASE
* BEAUJOLAIS-VILLAGES 1999	7.49	89.88
First Prize The 1999 harvest was exceptional for the wines of Beaujolais. This fresh, new offering displays uncommon depth and richness. Its bright, lively fruit aromas and complexity make it delicious. (4412)
* CHENAS 1999	8.25	99.00
First Prize One of Beaujolais' lesser known Crus, Chenas combines power and finesse with a spicy character and floral aromas. (4505)
* REGNIE 1999	8.95	107.40
First Prize Regnie's trademark ripe red-currant, strawberry and raspberry fruit is very evident in this supple and delicious 1999. (4506)
* COTE DE BROUILLY 1999	9.95	119.40
First Prize The character of the Cote de Brouilly comes from its soil. A former volcano, the hill on which the vineyards lie is rich fertile rock. Comparatively more heady than other crus, this wine displays a predominant apricot flavor. (4525)
* CHIROUBLES 1999	9.95	119.40
First Prize Fresh, fruit, light and supple with a charming bouquet of fresh violets, this engaging cru is one of our most popular. Chiroubles is located on a bed of granite and is at the highest altitude of all the Beaujolais crus. (4508)
* MORGON 1999	9.95	119.40
First Prize Known for having the fruit of Beaujolais and the charm of Burgundy, Morgon is a lusty, full-bodied Cru with touches of cherry, kirsch and apricot. (4407)
* JULIENAS 1999	10.49	125.88
First Prize The rich, clay soil of this popular Beaujolais produces a powerful and robust wine with a ruby red color, peach and raspberry flavors and supple charm. (4406)
* FLEURIE 1999	10.95	131.40
First Prize Fleurie is one of the finest expressions of the fruity charms of Beaujolais. It displays a very floral bouquet with hints of iris, roses and violets. Delicious peach and blackcurrant flavors add to its charm. (4531)
* ST. AMOUR 1999	12.50	150.00
First Prize Until Regnie was elevated to Cru status in 1988, St. Amour was the youngest Cru of Beaujolais. This 1998 Flower Label wine is delicate with delicious flavors of peaches and raspberries. (4413)

First Prize Winning Label Chardonnays	BOTTLE	CASE
BEAUJOLAIS BLANC 1998	7.95	95.40
First Prize Label Only 1% of all of Beaujolais wine produced is white. Georges Duboeuf crafts the best! (4455)
* MACON-VILLAGES 1998	8.49	101.88
First Prize Label Produced from 100% Chardonnay, this wine yields a fine balance of lemony fruit and acidity. Its elegance and grace are amazing. (4431)
* ST.-VERAN 1998	9.95	119.40
First Prize Label Golden honey nose with tropical fruit flavors and full-body. This Chardonnay is among our most popular. (4432)
* POUILLY-FUISSE 1997	14.95	179.40
First Prize Label 1997 Pouilly Fuisses are complex wines with floral notes and hints of toasted oak that mingle with round, supple, mouthfilling fruit and crisp acidity. (4435)

DUBOEUF SUMMER SAMPLER 119.95
Twelve Bottles Consists of one of each of the nine reds and three whites shown here bearing an asterisk(*). (6609)

Champagne Demoiselle Reserve Special of Lucas Carton

FROM ALAIN SENDERENS

Alain Senderens, the renowned chef of Paris' famed restaurant Lucas Carton, explains: "In 1993, when I met my good friend Paul-Francois Vranken, I asked him to create a special cuvée of Champagne that I would be proud to serve to the guests of Lucas Carton. After much research M. Vranken created Champagne Demoiselle Reserve Special Lucas Carton.

THE TASTE

It is a very dry Champagne that imparts a buttery flavor on the palate and it was created to be consumed with the cuisine of my beloved restaurant." (1140)

They're STILL Talking About Dan's Papers...

"Indispensable — not only for listings and local news and issues, but for its idiosyncratic, witty, commonsensical take on a part of the world in creasingly overrun by (as Dickens put it in Little Dorrit): 'the noisy, eager, forward (i.e. pushy) and vain.'"

"Everyone knows that Dan's Papers and Eastern Long Island are inseparable." —Mario M. Cuomo, Former New York Governor

"Now that the global village has become a nightmare consisting of a hundred million interconnected terminals, each of us helplessly clinging to this network as surely as houseflies to a spider's web, a trip to the Hamptons grants us immunity from the purgatory known as the media highway. There, while resting comfortably among the potato fields of our dreams, one can read Dan's Papers. Dan sits there perched like some ancient bird observing the landscape from above — sometimes ahead, mostly behind — unruffled by the ever present banality disguised as modern communications. "Whenever I'm in the Hamptons, I read Dan's Papers before I go to bed at night, and wake up to the morning birds."

—Len Riggio,
CEO, Barnes & Noble

have had their names changed to be the names of favorite celebrities just so that they can eat.

People say, you're not Paul Newman. You say, yes I am and you show them a card and it says Paul Newman on it, which you wouldn't otherwise be able to do.

There have been problems where people have said they are somebody but the maitre'd's are very skilled. Maitre'd's now have to go to school for more than seven years of study and they get three or four advanced degrees until finally they can figure out by just a twitch on the face or a sideways' glance, whether someone is telling the truth about whether they are going to eat.

There are dangers in being a maitre'd, just a few years ago Drew Nieporent, who's a very well known chef in New York, owns Nobu and a couple of other restaurants in the downtown area of the city, was working as a maitre'd and chef over at East Hampton Point when somebody came over and said they had promised me this table and now there's people sitting there, and they said they can feed us but they want us at this other table and we want that table. And, Drew Nieporent said to them, "Well, I'm sorry, but we're doing the best we can."

At which point the guy hauled off and socked him in the jaw and flattened him, then left. There are much more sophisticated ways of dealing with the situation. I remember many years ago back in the old days the owner of the Blue Marlin in Montauk, just came in on a Saturday night, I think it was toward Labor Day weekend, about six o'clock, the place was full of people, was kind of chaotic but seemed to be functioning without him, when he came in and he had just had it, stood up on a table and said, "Everybody out! Everybody out of my restaurant, I'm closing it down for the night. I don't care where you are in the meal, there's no bills, just get out."

Everybody got up and left, hungry I guess. So, there have been quite a few changes and we just have to roll with the punches. •

Walking Off The Cliff

It's A Strange Thing, But Contrary To Expectations The Year 2000 Doesn't Seem To Be One

By Dan Rattiner

I don't know about you, but I am having a lot of trouble with 2000. Something is off. It's the year. I really know that it is the year. But something is wrong with it. It doesn't seem like it could be a year.

Nineteen hundred and something is a year. I know that we've had nineteen hundred and something for so long, certainly for all the days of my life, and when I think of what year it is since the birth of Jesus what comes to mind is nineteen hundred something. It rolls off the tongue. It's what it's always been. It is what I am used to.

Nineteen hundred and ninety-eight. That's a year. The year of our lord six hundred and fifty one. That's a year. Eighteen Twelve. That's a year. They had a war that year. And somebody wrote an overture about that year.

If two thousand is not a year, it's not a place or a time either. You can't fly from JFK to two thousand. You can't show up at two thousand. (Though you can show up at twenty hundred.) The closest thing that two thousand comes to, in my mind, is a model number. Buy the new Toshiba Turbo 2000.

I knew there was going to be trouble when, in October of 1999 (there was a year), I would drive to work and I would pass the Plitt Ford Dealership on the Montauk Highway and they had the new models out on display. There were big white 00 letters taped to the inside of the windshield. Hurry in and see the brand new oh ohs.

Uh oh.

I write checks and it doesn't even seem like I am spending any money. I write 00 up in the corner. Ha ha. No way anybody is going to make anything out of that.

During the late nineteen eighties and the early nineteen nineties, as we began to get ready for the millennium, it never occured to me that this was going to be such a serious problem. The big millennium, with the year 2000 in lights, was this shining, glistening thing up in the sky, the herald of a new age, a transformation into the future. It hasn't turned out that way.

A friend of mine says he shares this creepy feeling I have about being in this new century. He says we're in the naught-naughts. And he says it feels like he's walking around in a fog and I agree with him. I mean, how real is it when you pick up a copy of Time Magazine and the cover says publication day is May 29, 2000. This makes no sense.

A friend of mine shares this creepy feeling I have about being in this new century... it feels like he's walking around in a fog.

The Atomic Age began in 1945. America the Beautiful was founded in 1776. Columbus discovered America in 1492. We're stuck in the naught naughts. It was supposed to be different. Flash Gordon, ray guns and space ships. But I still brush my teeth in the morning, take out the garbage in big black garbage bags and throw them in the cans in the stockade. I run out of propane in the grille, clean up the cat throw up, get a flat and change the tire. And it's all happening in a year that makes no sense.

The only way out of this, of course, is the future. But it seems such a long way off. Next year will be 01. The year after that 02. These are particularly low profile years, sort of no brainers. After all this time, after all this profoundness and deep thinking and nuance, all these philosophical treaties by Socrates and Whitehead, Machiavelli and Luther, Darwin and Plato, we come toddering out to 01 and 02. Your basic beginner's classes.

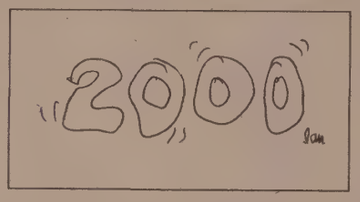
Frankly, I think we will not come out into a date of substance until twenty twelve. Everything up until 09 is just dumb, then there is twenty ten which sounds like something a bookie would say, then twenty 'leven which sounds like something a four year old might say, and then, finally, something adult. Twenty twelve. Twelve years from now, at long last, there will be a year that will have some dignity to it.



Well, maybe this is just me, maybe everybody else is just fine about it being the oh oh year. As for me, when they say "turn of the century" it will always mean the turn of the eighteenth century into the nineteenth, the assassination of President McKinley, the dotage of Queen Victoria and the dawning of the modern age. That's what they taught us when I was a kid growing up in school, and I'm not about to be told something different now.

Uh oh. Aught, aught. Quack.

The $100 Million Gift

"The Greatest Offer Of Philanthropy Ever To Take Place On The East End"

By Dan Rattiner

Courtney Ross got married the other day. It was no ordinary wedding. The wedding party, totaling about two hundred, was flown to Italy, where Ms. Courtney, one of the richest woman in America, was married to Swedish businessman Anders Holst, in the church of Orsanmichelle in Florence. The wedding was conducted by the Reverend Jessie Jackson; Steven Spielberg gave away the bride. Every member of the wedding party was given a car and a driver for the duration so they could tour the countryside and at one point the wedding party was given a private tour of the Uffizi Gallery. Some streets nearby were closed to traffic for this event.

Steven Spielberg as you probably know, lives in East Hampton and Courtney Ross who is the widow of the legendary businessman Steven Ross is also a resident here. This was a very rich person's wedding. Indeed, many guests said they hadn't seen anything like it since the late Malcolm Frazer held his seventieth birthday party for about 500 of his closest friends in Morocco. But there's a difference. Courtney Ross had made public plans to give back to this community in a very big way. Having already spent ten million dollars over the last six years building a small private school in East Hampton, Courtney wants to spend another hundred million dollars to expand the school onto the fifty-five acres of woods that she purchased adjacent. It would become a major cultural institution in the Hamptons, in the same way that the Aspen Institute enhances Aspen, Colorado. And since more than half the student body of the school is currently from the local community, it amounts to a major gift to the year round residents of the Hamptons.

It amazes me that some people don't see this for what it is. I was at a party last night, at which one member of the local media, noting that Mrs. Ross is going to have to secure permits from various town boards, said that he was going to give plenty of ink to the small local minority who oppose this project.

"We're going to play this up: the Empress Courtney sitting on her bulldozer building her private kingdom, and all these local people who send their kids to the Ross School – have you noticed how excited they are about the place? They're like zealots, zombies."

Since I have a son at the Ross School, I told him that I must be one of those zombies.

"Tell me," he said, "what are you going to do with these five thousand extra cars that are going to be coming to the Hamptons?"

"The faculty and administration." I told him, "will max out around five hundred. The kids don't have cars."

"We're gonna play this up bigger than Rennert," he said. "This project makes the Rennert house look like an outhouse."

Here are some facts about the Rennert house and about the Ross Project.

Ira Rennert, a wealthy industrialist, who owns factories around the country that mine coal, manufacture the Humvee and the Hummer, produce sewing machines and lumber, is building in the middle of Sagaponack the largest private home in America. It will occupy a hundred thousand square feet of space, have twenty-nine bedrooms and parking for about fifty cars. The entire project is for Mr. Rennert, his family and whatever friends he might care to invite in. He's a close friend and supporter of Benjamin Netenyahu, former prime minister of Israel who is currently being investigated for illegal activities.

Mr. Rennert will undoubtedly build a fence around his property, thereby closing off about fifty acres of Sagaponack from the public forever. His factories often receive violations for pollution and to the best of my knowledge, other than donate monies to charity, Mr. Rennert has never used his vast wealth to create a museum, school, medical research facility, or any other institution for the public good in America, much less in Bridgehampton.

The land on which the Ross School sits... is a little used woods, adjacent to the East Hampton Airport, currently zoned industrial.

As for Courtney Ross, her small school with its 110 students already is a cultural landmark in the town. There are weekly concerts, plays, lectures and readings to which everyone in the community is welcome. This newspaper recently held its bi-annual, eight week long, "They Made the Movies Here" Film Festival in the Ross School Library and the place was packed with people from town. In the expanded school, should it come to pass, there will be an institute for education at which experimental curriculums will be discussed, not only for Ross but for the surrounding public school system. There will also be an elders center where successful older people can visit and impart what they have learned.

The land on which the Ross School sits is not beautiful oceanfront farmland as is the case with the Rennert property but a little used woods, adjacent to East Hampton Airport, currently zoned industrial for things such as factories, oil refineries, warehouses and assembly plants. Instead, classrooms, laboratories and dorms would be nestled along paths in the woods. And if people are concerned that pollution might filter down into the water table below, they can forget it. Ross will build whatever water purification system the town requires.

I might add, that I have never met Courtney Ross just as I have never met Ira Rennert, so I can't tell you whether these are nice people or not, but I can judge them by their work. My son studies his courses – chemistry, Spanish, integrated math, cultural history and so forth, in classrooms that are filled with replicas and copies of some of the world's great sculptures, art and paintings. He is studying Wu Shu, a Japanese martial art. He composed the music to a movie that some other students made during the January break. He was offered but took a pass on going to China for a week. He intends to do a school sponsored outward bound program in the woods of North Carolina in September.

I might add that had he stayed in East Hampton High School (and amid the poor condition of the poor state of public education in this country, East Hampton is among the best schools) he and his fellow students would be surely talking about the latest problem the administration in the school seems concerned about, which is whether or not to lock up all the Crayola Crayons. Crayolas reportedly are made with asbestos in trace amounts and its been suggested they could be harmful if eaten. In the end, East Hampton Superintendent Dr. Furman issued a two page memo requiring that all Crayolas be locked up until the issue is looked into further and determinations made.

In another move, an apparent economy measure, Furman closed down a teachers' committee whose purpose was to discuss and make recommendations about the school curriculum. She did this at a meeting to which the teachers were not invited and there's talk of the teachers going out on strike. Meanwhile, at the Ross School several monks have been flown in from Tibet to stay in residence for a month and teach the students about Asian

Caring For The Hamptons – One Of The World's Beautiful Places – Is A Full Time Job

By Dan Rattiner

Notes from the weekend.

On Sunday morning, as sometimes happens when you have kids, somebody got injured and I had to make a quick run to the emergency room at Southampton Hospital.

Driving through downtown East Hampton, I passed the Presbyterian Church where services were in progress. Nearby, there were people dressed in their Sunday best walking out from the concluding service as the Episcopalian Church. The great white swans were paddling around in Town Pond. All seemed right with the world. This is what people come out here for. The old New England villages, the peace and quiet of the country, the vast expanse of our beaches.

The time was 9:30 in the morning and I mark it here because from there things took a different turn.

West of the Red Horse Market and Dune Alpin Farm, still on the Montauk Highway, I saw on the right hand side of the road, tied to a tree, a white half inflated helium balloon looking forlornly like the remains of a private party, which it surely was.

Ten feet away, on the grass, was a startling sight. Two people, in festive party clothes, were lying on the grass, locked in an embrace, fast asleep. Not fifteen feet away, the traffic was roaring by in both directions.

At the hospital – and I've been availing myself of the services of this place for more than twenty years – I brought my kid in and since this was an emergency situation and I'd phoned in from the car, I thought I would be able to simply go past the lobby, punch the button which opens the automatic swing doors and walk into the emergency room directly.

But the button had been replaced by security code buttons. You'd have to know which ones to press. I saw a nurse and said, "We have to go right in. I called ahead."

"You can't," she said. "I have to let you in."

She knew me. She went around and did, but though took my kid in she told me to wait outside for five minutes.

"What's going on?" I asked.

"We had some violence in the emergency room," she said. "The whole staff was barricaded in the control room. A bunch of drunks trashed the place."

"But being with someone when they're injured is half the battle," I said.

"I know," she said. "But that's the way it is."

An hour later we were driving home. Coming down into Water Mill past the Villa Maria convent, two men in a Mercedes convertible roared by me at sixty miles an hour. Maybe I was going too slow. I checked my own speed. Forty. As they pulled in front of me, one of them, without turning around, held up his middle finger at me.

Hey, whatever makes him happy.

A week ago, in the gossip pages of the New York tabloids, I read where Wall Street tycoon Ted Field has rented Brian Bantree's house this summer and you could expect some pretty wild parties from he and his friends and the young women they've arranged to have come out.

Ivan Wilzig, the "bad brother" of John, "Good Brother" Wilzig, who together own The Castle in Water Mill, were having, according to the New York Post, what they promised would be a terrific party where all the invited guests were to arrive dressed as bunnies. Rapper Jay Z, who has more legendary parties, has rented for the summer in Goose Creek. And I read of various other plans, some successful, some not, for big corporations or cable networks or professional sport franchises, renting houses where they plan big wild parties.

Personally, as a long time year round resident, I don't appreciate people behaving in ways that show complete disregard for the community. What goes on on private property is their own business and people are welcome to behave any way that they like. Hurray for them and we have plenty of fun at our house, too.

But these are beautiful old seafront New England villages, however, and I think we should react to all of this as forcefully as we can, or we are going to wind up with the whole Hamptons trashed and the people who care about this place gone somewhere else.

Years ago I worked at what was then the PanAm Building, now the MetLife building, on the 64th floor. There was a brightly lit marble lobby at the top of the escalators coming up from Grand Central Station with a bar and restaurant and the elevators going up in front of you. If you came in very early you checked in with some guards who wrote your name in a book and kept track of you, since the building was pretty much unoccupied at that hour.

On the Monday after New Year's Eve that year I remember coming in very early and signing in the book and the guard laughing, "Boy, you should have been here two nights ago. It was quite a New Year's Eve party."

"What happened?" I asked.

"At three in the morning this couple came out of the restaurant drunk as skunks and seemed to think they were out on the street. They were there in the lobby trying to hail a cab. After awhile when it was apparent none was going to arrive, they took off their clothes and started going at it right on the marble floor and this big crowd gathered around. It was something!"

Anything goes in New York. It's almost expected. But it's not that way in the Hamptons – and nobody should think it is. •

Prom 1, Playoffs 0

Of Course, On The East End, There Is No Question Which Is More Important

By Pam Gibson

There is continuing, intense, heated conversation at dinner tables and social events all over the North Fork, as everyone takes up positions in the great Prom Night vs. Sports Event Debate. Lifelong friendships have been lost and made, while sides are chosen. Surprisingly, while the differences often seem to split among the parent's generation along gender lines, it is to their credit, not so clear cut among the high school students themselves.

This all started when Bob Liepa, a sports writer for the Greenport newspaper The Suffolk Times, penned an opus titled "The Problem with Prom Dates," in the June 1st issue of that weekly local newspaper. It wasn't the first time this controversy was mentioned in the paper. In fact, the week before "Dancing versus Volleyball" was printed, without a clear by-line, and almost no one saw anything to get excited about, except for perhaps the quoted coach's remarks. Apparently, the Mattituck High School Girl's Volleyball Team qualified for the playoffs for the first time in 11 years, but the Prom was the same day. The athletes voted and the Prom won. I am sure this wasn't the first time a tough scheduling choice had to be made, but the resulting remarks in The Suffolk Times, that the girls "blew an opportunity from a public relations angle. Can you imagine what a great story that would have been if the Tucker's played the playoff match and, win or lose, then darted off to the prom?" started the ball rolling. Not only were many incensed by this reference to girls being athletes and prom dates, and how press worthy that would be, but many were angry about the meat of this column comparing the girls to the hero of the columnist's story, Conner Dowling.

Conner really is a hero. A senior at Mattituck High School, he earned a place at the state track and field qualifying meet, and made the decision to pass on the senior trip to Disney World and participate in the meet. Further, young Conner, finishing first among Suffolk County Class C Athletes in both the discus and shot put, withdrew his qualification in the shot put so that his fellow teammate T.J. Rempe, who came in second, could go to the state meet with him. Talk about being a star athlete and a real team player!

But this is where the comparison gets ugly. While Conner gave up a trip to Disney World, and lost the $500 trip fee, the girls voted to not give up the experience of the Prom, and not to waste the considerable expense already incurred for dresses and all the necessary preparation expense that the Prom requires. So, how important is the Prom?

I would certainly not have skipped mine, but when I said this out loud, one of my previously sane friends said that I was "shallow, a disgrace to equality for women, and not goal oriented." Well! Certainly not one to leave that remark unnoticed, I decided to pursue the subject. Some men, parent age, thought that the girls just proved the point they have always made, that "girl's or for that matter woman's sports are not serious." Refreshingly, the young high school students were split on this matter, and not according to gender. While some guys thought that the girls typically "caved-in to convention," other's remarked that "you can't just not go to the Prom." In a business meeting, this week, a man of considerable intelligence and reason remarked, that "women go to the opera because they like to dress up, while men would rather listen to a recording."

Then, as if this weren't hot enough, Bob Liepa, the sports writer of hotly debated gender sensitivity, followed the next week with "Studying Sports and the Sexes." A dream come true for those enjoying the anguish of this controversy. The column stated with authority, that " With men, it's about winning, good competition... it's serious business... similar to that taken by the commander of a military campaign... losses are hard to take, tend to linger, and can take weeks to shake." And then, "With women, it's about having fun, socializing, sharing a few laughs" and "moving on with life, win or lose." He goes on, "For women, the impact of a loss generally lasts as long as it takes to walk off the field." And what's more Liepa goes on to refer to men as "hunter/gatherer types." And quote a girl's soccer coach as remarking that within minutes of a playoff loss, "his girls" were discussing the "merits of Vanilla Ice's hair."

Digging a deeper hole the column goes on, "Boys supposedly have plenty of competitive drive and take criticism better than girls. On the other hand, girls are quicker learners, and more receptive to instruction, and, with girls, personality is important." Then, cinching his position, in case anyone did not get the subtlety of this all, he goes on to rehash the previous two weeks of his remarks in The Suffolk Times about the beleaguered Mattituck Girls Volleyball Team's decision to attend their Prom, complete with a recount of Conner Dowling's hero status. But when you get to the part of the story when the question "Does this have to do with chromosome structure?" was poised, I am happy to report, I know few of any gender or generation that stood silent, and in support of the view presented.

At this point, one neighbor of mine, who initially wasn't sure why women played sports and why his tax dollars supported athletics for women, stated that "if my wife knew more about sports, maybe she would be less bugged when I watch football on the weekends." Not exactly high sensitivity, or a point of view that had occurred to me, but nonetheless a real comment on the effect this debate was having on the community.

Feeling oddly optimistic and curious, I looked back through several months of sports columns, just in case there was a trend. In a May 4th column, "Carolyn doesn't mind getting her uniform dirty..." I looked to see if any of the guys minded getting their uniforms dirty, but only found a story about Jon "soaring to new heights" and Kyle "in a sportsmanlike gesture" congratulating Jon on beating his school record in the pole vault. On May 25th, members of a girl's softball team "sat on the infield, rolled in the dirt like children." And the previously mentioned "Dancing versus Volleyball" appeared. I suppose, I could have continued to get riled up going back through the years, but really I'm sure anyone with an agenda could find examples to support their views.

This past week there were two heated letters to the editor, not in support of the paper's columns. In one the writer refers to her track coach "taking us seriously, like we were boys." in the other an athletes coach says he thought "While reading your article about the sexes... I had to make sure it wasn't an issue from the 1950s." He goes on to state that he can't believe the stereotypes and ignorance towards female athletes.

I feel compelled to point out my own stance in the area of sports and the general bonding ritual that accompanies discussions of professional sports events, just in case you are not clear about my own agenda. For years, I always felt left out, unable to participate at board meetings, or business lunches when the conversation inevitably turned to sports. So one year I spent the entire year studying the paper, reading every column, discussing sports with my staff and family, and waiting for that opportune moment when I could jump in and be part of the game. I was really, as usual for me, highly over prepared, but was careful when the moment arrived to be informed, to the point, not talk for more that thirty seconds, and do this all with a sense of fun. When I stopped talking every single person at the table, a combination of highly technical clients and co-workers, all men, turned to look at me, as though I had lost my mind. I have to admit, sitting there with my perfectly coifed French twist, wire-rimmed glasses, and in a little pink Chanel number, I did feel somehow deranged, as though I had landed on a strange planet. I never let that happen again. Now when the conversation at the end of the usual business lunch turns to sports, as it inevitably does, I just leave the table, completely unnoticed, of course, and find the maitre d'. I hand him my credit card, and then, completely unnoticed, return to the table. When the maitre d' later arrives with my credit card and the bill to be signed, everyone thanks me for lunch, and that is when I close the deal, and I know that while I couldn't join the conversation, I did own the moment.

I am sure the young athletes from Mattituck High School also owned the moment when they appeared, in all their perfection, ready for their prom. In the end, after all has been over-said and done, all they wanted to do was go to their prom.

Computer generated image (from the STAR detector at RHIC) of gold ion collision at 30 billion electron volts

The First Collisions

At Brookhaven National Laboratory, RHIC Successfully Smashes Its First Ions

By Jerry Cimisi

"We've been catching our breath. After all that work, it actually works," said Tim Hallman, physicist at Brookhaven National Laboratory's Relativistic Heavy Ion Collider (RHIC). He was referring to the first collisions of ions that took place on the evening of Monday, June 12. The much heralded complex and monumental physics project at the lab had taken its first experimental step in what is hoped to be a recreation of the state of matter in the moments immediately following nothing less than the creation of the universe.

Hallman is deputy spokesperson and group leader of BNL scientists at STAR (Solenoidal Tracker at RHIC), one of the experiments at RHIC. "It was 8:56 p.m. to be exact," said Hallman. "We had been trying hard for three or four days. It was obvious when you saw it."

The "seeing," of course, in this subatomic realm, was done by computer imagery. One saw a spoked floweret with a dark center, the "spokes" being the stream of energy released from the collision.

RHIC accelerates gold ions (ions are atoms that have been stripped of their electrons), at near light speed through two underground ringed shaped tunnels (2.4 miles in circumference) which intersect at six places. The intersection of the beams is where the collisions take place The beam energies on these first collisions were 30 billion (or giga) election volts – 30 GeV – per nucleon: an appreciable amount of energy on the subatomic scale. This degree of energy exceeds by four times the energies produced by the CERN accelerator in Switzerland.

The ions begin their rush through RHIC at the lab's Tandem Van de Graaff Accelerator, where a thin pellet of gold is bombarded by ions. The gold atoms are then collected by an electric field which accelerates them. The atoms are then shot through another accelerator, called the Booster, which further increases their speed. The next step is the Alternating Gradient Synchrotron which strips more electrons from the gold atoms, so that when they reach RHIC they are travelling at just under the speed of light (99.97 light speed).

Eventually RHIC will be exceeding its own beginning steps with a goal of 100 GeV.

"In a few days," said Hallman, "we hope to be reaching 70 GeV. This is a special time. We're still trying to make things routine."

In the past few weeks Hallman has basically been on call around the clock. "A lot of people have been putting in 16 hour days. In a few weeks we should be converting to another mode. There are about fifteen to twenty people whom you might call the experts on this project from all over the country and the world. Eventually there will be three eight hour shifts, with several experts overseeing each, round the clock. Right now there are probably about 500 people here working on various aspects of RHIC.

"We will probably run until the end of August," he added. "Then our funds for the year will run out. Next year we should be running about thirty weeks."

In addition to STAR, whose purpose is to search for the quark-gloun plasma that is theorized to exist immediately following the Big Bang, the other experiments at RHIC are:

PHENIX (Pioneering High Energy Interaction Experiment): for locating and measuring photons, electrons, muons and hadrons.

BRAHMS (Broad Range Hadron Magnetic Strip Spectrometer), will select a small number of particles for the collisions at RHIC to measure as precisely as possible their momentum and energy.

PHOBOS, in contrast, will evalutate a large number of collisions, on the premise that the collisions that will be of interest to science are rare. According to the lab's RHIC website, "This technique will permit researchers to detect rare and unusual events quickly and to study in detail about one percent of the produced particles. Interestingly, the acronym PHOBOS does not stand for anything. There was once a larger project called MARS that was scaled down to become PHOBUS, one of the moons of Mars.

PP2PP (Polarized Proton on Unpolarized Pro-ton), will study proton scattering as will as the spin of the proton. The spin of the proton is determined by the sum of the spins of the various particles within the proton:

ZDC (Zero Degree Calorimeters), well measure neutral energy around the beam and measure what is called centrality and luminousity.

On Monday, June 19, a week after the first collisions, the RHIC team was planning to raise the energy level of the collisions to 70 GeV, far and away more energy than had been produced by any subatomic accelerators. It had been the hope to achieve this by Sunday, June 18, but the machine had been down for the day.

Hallman explained that one of the major difficulties of the project was coordinating the two beams of ions. "The beams are interjected into the blue and yellow rings separately, so they start out independent of each other. In each of the beams the ions travel in bursts or bunches every 110 nanoseconds apart. A nanosecond is 10 times ten to the minus ninth power. You might think of them as swarms of bees. The two beams have to be coordinated with electromagnetic fields."

By Monday morning, the RHIC team was hoping to achieve collisions at 70 GeV by afternoon, but there was a problem in coordinating the beams, a situation that remained until presstime late Tuesday.

At the end of that day, John Harris, principal spokesman for STAR, talked about the inception of RHIC – and just what Relativistic Heavy Ion Collider means. As previously mentioned, ions are atoms stripped of electrons. Heavy ions are from elements lower on the periodic table. Relativistic refers to the near light speeds at which the collisions are attained; at such speeds the effects of Einstein's Theory of Relativity kick in. "Relativistic heavy ion physics is a subfied of nuclear physics," said Harris. "Nuclear physics deals with the nucleus of the atom. The work at RHIC also crosses into the realm of high energy physics, which probes the basic constituents of fundamental particles."

The RHIC Project had its beginnings at a meeting at Brookhaven National Laboratory in 1983, Harris related. It was argued by the scientific community that a facility such as the one RHIC would become was needed for heavy ion research. The initiative to build such a complex took hold in the United States. Later in the 1980s the Department of Energy made its plans for RHIC and by 1991 construction had begun. RHIC was completed in 1999. Beam was first circulated through the rings last summer.

In regards to RHIC's first achievements, Harris said it was ten years of work beginning to bear fruit. Like Hallman and others he had been entrenched at RHIC day after day "for the last two and half to three weeks." Harris, who is from Yale, is going back to Connecticut for several days and then will be returning to RHIC the following week. As Tim Hallman had related, the immediate future will demand from the scientists at RHIC a good deal more work, and, it is hoped, results from subatomic collisions at energy levels never previously achieved. •

The Perfect Storm

An Air National Guardsman In Westhampton Recalls The Storm That Became The Movie

By Jim Tuite

A decade later, John Spillane still has flashbacks and bad dreams.

"I told my wife this morning that I dreamed I was in civvies, sitting down, eating pizza with Rick Smith, Spillane was saying at his home in Shoreham. Rick was in his flight suit and, in the dream, I said to him Do you remember the last time we had pizza?"

The last time they had pizza was on Halloween in 1991. As members of an Air Force/National Guard pararescue crew based at Westhampton Beach, they had just returned from a fruitless search for a fisherman believed missing off the rocks of the Rhode Island coast. The pizzas were bought with refunded money from discarded soda bottles at the base.

The next call was for a search mission by the 106th Air National Guard at Gabreski Airport to assist a boat adrift in a storm some seventy miles southeast of Westhampton. Rick Smith would not return alive, Spillane's broken body would be retrieved after nearly seven hours in wind-whipped waters and the stage would be set for one of the most heralded adventure books and motion pictures of the decade.

The Perfect Storm has earned nearly $2-million for its author, Sebastian Junger (pronounced Yunger), with the sale of a half-million hardcover books and the film rights purchased by Warner Brothers. The movie will be released June 30.

Spillane has been "fictionalized" in the movie because he and other surviving crew members declined to give Warner Brothers the right to use their names without compensation.

When the company refused, according to Spillane, the film rescuers became the fictitious Lt. Barry Evans (Josh Hopkins) and Lt. Kenny Mitchell (Dash Mishok). Mishok is playing Spillane, Hopkins depicts the late Rick Smith.

Spillane was most concerned about obtaining financial help for the family of the widowed Marianne Smith Stahl, who has since married another pararescuer.

"I didn't see why we shouldn't be compensated," said Spillane. "Especially Rick Smith. However, the Air Force supported Warners in a big way. The Air Force gave us no recognition, though we had served it well."

Meanwhile in Gloucester, The Perfect Storm Foundation created by Junger has been collecting thousands of dollars in contributions to "provide educational and cultural incentives to the children of men and women who make their living in the commercial fishing industry."

Contributions range from $10,000 (Foundation Friend) to $100. T-shirts are selling for $15, baseball caps, for $20.

The surviving crew members are planning to write a book about their personal experiences in this atmospheric phenomenon, a confluence of three fierce weather systems. "The money would be nice, but we also want to tell public about the little known risks taken by pararescue crews," Spillane said.

Spillane has always lived on the edge, as a policeman, an airman in the Gulf War, as a pararescuer and now, as a Fire Department lieutenant assigned to the Bronx, where he was born of immigrant Irish parents.

"We didn't know there were three storms gathering over the area," he said. "At no time were we informed that the forecast was for 'severe' weather. Regulations forbid our taking off in severe weather.

"I had no problem telling Junger about the rescue attempt but I said 'Please don't make us look like a bunch of boobs.' This was the most disastrous mission I ever took part in, the only mission that went horribly wrong in my thirteen years with the Air National Guard.

"At no time would the regulations permit a copter to take off under severe turbulence," he said. "The crew never got that report. I believe the command structure got a slap on the wrist for that."

When the "Mayday" call came from the Coast Guard, the copter took off with Spillane and Smith, two pilots and a flight engineer.

Meanwhile – and unrelated to the pararescue adventure – the Andrea Gail, a 72-foot steel boat, had lost her battle to the storm as she sought to return to Gloucester laden with tons of fish hauled in from a month at sea. This was the opening segment of the Junger book. Winds approaching 100 miles an hour sent huge waves across the Andrea Gail, and the boat disappeared into the swirling waters with all six crew members aboard.

John Spillane

Later, Spillane's Coast Guard chopper, buffeted by the wind and unable to get refueled, also was lost to the sea.

"I bailed out while the helicopter was in a controlled hover," he said. "That means you're getting out while the platform is still stable. The pilot descended to 4,000 feet of zero visibility and just established hover when the Number One engine went down."

The impact of the water broke four of Spillane's ribs, his arm and leg and ruptured his kidney and bruised his pancreas. The force of the wind blew off a crew member's laced up combat boot. Spillane's own lifejacket, though tightly strapped on, was blown off and attached itself to the back of the pilot.

"He is left alone and dying on the sea," Junger wrote.

"I'm dying on the inside," Spillane told the author. "...I was by myself, and realized my only chance of survival was to make it until the storm subsides."

For more than six hours Spillane had to breathe air without taking in water. He feared that death was imminent but later told an interviewer "something inside of me would not let me give up." It was this tenacity that led a men's physical culture magazine (Muscle and Fitness) to name him among the three "mentally toughest" men in the world.

While this drama ensued, Spillane's wife,Laura, was becoming frantic back in Shoreham as she awaited the birth of the first of their three children.

"I was calling for information as the copter was crashing," said Mrs. Spillane. "One man at the base hung up on me. A supervisor told me 'Don't worry, I'll find out what's going on.' "

The supervisor was Jack Brehm, also a Shoreham native, who co-wrote a book with the title of the pararescue motto, "That Others May Live."

Like Spillane, he's eager to publicize the exploits of the so called PJs,or parachute jumpers.

There are only a few hundred military PJs, whose essential duty is to rescue downed airmen, frequently behind enemy lines in combat.

They perform with as much or more derring-do as the Navy Seals or Army Green Berets, but they are a tighter and more elite, though less recognized force.

Ninety percent of candidates drop out of each class of eighty at the PJ "Superman" School in San Antonio, Brehm wrote in his book, co-authored by Pete Nelson. The survivors then face a grueling regimen of training in scuba diving, mountain climbing, field tactics, weapons training and even paramedicine.

Through all of this, Junger has emerged a millionaire media star. "I don't begrudge him that," says Spillane, "but we (the crew) are not happy about the way Warner Brothers treated us."

Junger has had little to do with the movie. "We all know, of course, what Hollywood producers do to books," he wrote in The Times. "They dumb them down, change their plots, violate their integrity, put stupid dialogue in characters mouths."

He was as surprised as anyone when his book, originally figured to sell 40,000 or so to hard-nose adventure readers, took off and made The New York Times best-seller list in June of 1977. He told an interviewer that he tried to escape a People magazine interview "because I didn't want people to think I'm using the book for my own celebrity."

But he did say, on Oprah's TV show, that "I don't need to sell any more books. I've made much more money than I have any idea what to do with."

culture.

As far as Mrs. Ross' wedding is concerned, well she's living the American Dream. People have come as immigrants to this country from all over the world to have the opportunity to have this dream. They kiss the ground when they arrive and they cry and cheer and maybe they read about Mrs. Ross's wedding and think what an outrageous way to spend all this money. But then they read about her planned expansion of the Ross School, and the scholarships that make it affordable for the local kids, and an overall plan to spend over $100 million on the school. As described by one public official, this is the greatest offer of philanthropy ever to take place on the entire East End.

Spending money on yourself is one thing, spending money on others is another. I can tell the difference.

The proposal for the expansion of the Ross School should and will be gone over with a fine tooth comb. I think, guided by our town officials, it will make a splendid addition to this landscape. If I ever meet Mrs. Ross, I intend to offer her – she's welcome to refuse – a big wedding kiss, actual or virtual, whichever she prefers. She's made a most remarkable philanthropic offer.

play review: hamlet II

By Jan Silver

So Sam Bobrick made a comedy out of Hamlet, and titled it Hamlet II. Local community theater stalwart Jonathan Peters reads the script and finds it hilarious, thus Hamlet II is now playing as dinner theater on Sunday and Monday evenings at Rocco's in Sag Harbor. This is a silly, slapstick, bawdy and sometimes even funny show – as if a young, inexperienced Mel Brooks met a budding Damon Runyon on the street and they decided to write a comedy.

Most of the play's main characters die, as in Shakespeare's original version, but – to disclose just a few plot twists – Rosencrantz and Guildenstern become two halves of a comedy team and Ophelia is a pot-smoking Valley Girl type. There are also a few lines added for East-End-only laughs, such as King Claudius' comments about waterfront property.

This play's Prince Hamlet doesn't want to be bothered avenging his father's murder. Anthony King wades through Hamlet's mood changes with straight-faced sincerity. Queen Gertrude comes off as a lusty, overbearing mother. Ginger Buquicchio, as Gertrude, gets some of the play's best lines. (To Hamlet: "It's children like you who make a second marriage so difficult.")

Several of the actors play dual roles. Jim Jondreau is amusingly straight as a Polonius from Manhattan via Guys and Dolls, while his Ghost is a deadpan combination of George Burns, Jackie Mason and Lieutenant Columbo. Bryan Murphy, as Horatio and Rosencrantz, is very serious playing Hamlet's oldest friend and very busy as the conniving Rosencrantz. Director/producer Jonathan Peters plays Guildenstern and the Gravedigger.

Bill Paterson portrays King Claudius as happily lecherous and greedy. Terie Cox's Ophelia is a flirtatious nymphette who tries to steal the show with Imogene Coca/Martha Raye (remember them?) shtick. Tim Blutstein plays his Francisco/Bernardo roles comically poker-faced, and Joey Giovingo is a sometimes swish Laertes ("Call me Larry").

Jonathan Peters, working on a shoestring budget, directs the two acts swiftly but the pace is uneven. The Elizabethan costumes of Chas Roeder, lighting of Richard Neu and sound design of Kevin Collins aid Peters' antic concept.

Hamlet II plays as dinner/theater on Sunday and Monday evenings through July 10 at Rocco's on West Water Street, Sag Harbor. The three-course dinner and show is $39.95. For reservations, call 631-725-0358.

play review: fools

By Chris Stanley

Director Michael Disher pulled out all the stops in the Southampton Players' production of Neil Simon's comic fable Fools. An assortment of well chosen styles, coupled with innocently bawdy staging, allowed a perfectly coordinated ensemble of seasoned actors to whoop it up as good-natured absurd characters in Neil Simon's well-crafted fairytale about a Russian village whose population is made stupid by an ancient curse.

Chuck Novatka did a remarkable job as Leon Tolchinsky, the passionate young schoolteacher, who arrives to the village in response to a help wanted advertisement. He arrives like the morning sun, brimming over with joyous enthusiasm only to meet up with Snetsky, a shepherd who cannot remember his own name and Yenchna, a street vender who is selling flowers as fish while casually displaying her underpants.

Leon unofficially begins his teaching career by showing Snetsky, played with foppish agility by Paul Conroy, which side of his horn to blow into.

Joyce Pitkin, as Yenchna, portrays her clearly defined character with believable Russian flavor. Her marked conviction as a peddler of fish is both amusing and delightfully innocent. Later, during an afternoon rain, she unflinchingly sells the same flowers as umbrellas.

The villagers accept every absurdity as being perfectly logical and normal. Their innocence is so full of enthusiasm that they are completely unaware of the slapstick battering their inadvertent clumsiness inflicts on the hopeful young schoolteacher.

It was the idiot doctor Zubritzky, cheerfully played by Ken McGuire, and his emphatically stupid wife, brilliantly played by Vay David, that had placed the advertisement for a teacher to instruct their simple-minded daughter, Sophia –played with luscious charm and disarming innocence by Kymme Napoli.

Leon Tolchinsky's first encounter with Sophia Zubritsky punctuates a tour de force performance by Chuck Novatka as his character restrains himself while he makes every effort to teach the enchanting young Sophia, whom he is immediately smitten with.

Leon Tolchinsky goes into every possible contortion in his attempt to educate the lovely, juicy Sophia, while she batters him with her absurdities.

Although Leon is deeply enamored of the compliant Sophia, he sees no possibility of educating her within the required period of twenty-four hours as mandated by the curse. Defeated, he is about to leave the village when he learns that he is trapped there and that he too will become a fool if he doesn't succeed in teaching the unteachable girl.

Here the plot thickens as the menacing villain, Count Gregor Yousekevitch, broadly played by Jeff Schaeffer, swoops onto the stage to make his daily marriage proposal to Sophia.

"Fools cannot love," Slovitch, the butcher, expressively played by P.J. Palladino, informs him.

Director Michael Disher should be commended for every detail in the production:

As usual, his group scenes were exceptionally well coordinated and artfully choreographed. The revolving set was charming and truly appropriate for the piece. Set changes were done with gusto, humor

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander #111
SIPPY's

Last week I attended the Shelter Island Varsity and Junior Varsity Sports Awards. The coaches were terrific and they were careful to say something good about each child. They even gave out MVP and special Coaches Awards. The kids were all acting extremely cool and detached on stage, like they were there just to shut their parents up. I noticed just how frivolous they thought these awards were as they all fell over themselves running up to the podium whenever their names were called...

It occured to me watching these proceedings that we really need to also acknowledge sports parents. So I have invented the SIPPY. The Shelter Island Parent Performing Yeoman's duty award.

There should be a "Mileage SIPPY." This SIPPY goes to the parent who put the most miles on their vehicle driving any number of children to sports events and practices.

The "All Practices SIPPY." This SIPPY to be awarded to the parent(s) who watched every practice and made every game.

The "Best Face SIPPY." This SIPPY goes to the parent who was most able to look totally engrossed in any games they attended.

The "Kudo's SIPPY." For parents who can create a recording loop in their brains that repeats for the child over and over how great they looked out there and every minute details of every play they were involved in.

The "Grand SIPPY." This SIPPY goes to every single grandparent who attended the games of grandchildren and sat on hard benches with arthritic hips and never complained once. We have several people who qualify for the Grand SIPPY award.

The "Thankless Schlepping SIPPY." This SIPPY goes to every parent who schlepped sports equipment anywhere for the team. Often working alone and in the rain, these hearty souls truly warrant our gratitude.

The "Treats SIPPY," Given to the parent who brought the most treats to share to any event.

The "Cuckoo's Nest SIPPY." For any parent who, without a gun to their head, got on the bus with any team and endured teen and pre-teen streamof consciousness drivel, goofy behavior, horseplay and inane songs sung in four keys simultaneously.

The "Altruistic SIPPY." For parents who applauded for the other team's kids too.

The "Get a Grippy SIPPY." For parents who actually got upset at referee calls. Not being a sports person myself, I am always amazed at how seriously some people take sports. It's not like the kids are doing cancer research, they're just playing a game, and, I hope, having fun.

The "Clutch SIPPY". For any parent who came through in a clutch. Washed a jersey just in time for the game or raced to George's to get shoelaces minutes before closing, or ran to the store during the game and brought back water for the team. These unsung heroes deserve a SIPPY too.

The "Graveyard SIPPY." Awarded to any parent who works night shift and A) made it to any game B) remained conscious through the game.

The "Somebody Stop Me SIPPY." This award is given exclusively to coaches. These people have families and lives of their own and yet, they volunteer to coach our kids. Why? What drives them to do this? No one knows. Genetic researchers are speculating that they have a defective self-preservation gene.

A special thank you and farewell to Mr. Mundy who announced at the Awards that he was leaving coaching for a time. He coached my daughter's basketball team and she and her teammates adored him. He made sure every player had a turn in every game. It sounds small, but it isn't. Kids need acknowledgement and need to know that their contribution, however modest, is wanted.

I have clear painful memories of being the last name called when choosing teams for any sport. Only those of us who have had the experience, know how differently our self-esteem may have developed if someone, seeing our lack of confidence, gave us some of theirs. Thanx again for being a great coach Mr. Mundy.

Pesticide Notification Bill Poised to Pass

By the time you read this, the New York State Legislature is likely to have passed a pesticide notification bill that will impose strict notification guidelines on any users of pesticides, public and private.

Whether it is an individual who has commercial pesticide applied on the lawn of a house, or a school spraying its classrooms and grounds, notification to those who will come into contact with the pesticide will be required.

The bill will have homeowners required to notify any neighbors within 150 feet at least 48 hours before any commercial spraying of their property. If pesticides are applied by the homeowner, the lawn would have to be flagged.

Day care facilities would have to post announcements two days before pesticide use and schools would have to send notices home to parents three times a year detailing application times and locations and also have to give 48 hour notice prior to spraying.

Institutions and individuals who violate the law would be fined. The first violation would be followed by a warning, the second by a $100 dollar fine, the third by a $250 fine.

Understandably many environmental groups support the bill. There was a good deal of outcry last September and October in Suffolk and New York City over spraying for mosquitoes that might be carrying the West Nile virus. Many residents said they were not properly notified.

The more stringent rules about pesticide use would also encourage use of non-toxic substances that combat insects – these substances would not fall under the notification law.

Other groups do not support the bill and feel government will so restrict pesticide use that farmers' drops will suffer.

elaine k.g. benson, her daughter's column

I don't understand why some people are obsessed with food while others think of food as fuel. Food can be a joy. It can also be the bane of one's existence. I've always had a "special" diet. When I was twelve or thirteen, I became a vegetarian. At the time, I gave up all "flesh foods." I also gave up most dairy products. I read books like Diet for a Small Planet and spent my day considering what I would cook for dinner. I traveled with a small package of wheat germ in my purse and was always aware of trying to balance the amino acids in what I was eating in order to consume complete proteins. I wouldn't wear leather or fur. I cooked all my own food.

When I was sixteen I attended the Hampton Day School. We were lucky enough to have an upper school that went through twelfth grade. Tony Hitchcock, who now runs the Hampton Classic Horse Show, was my science teacher. We had a class in foraging. There were books like Stalking the Wild Asparagus and How to Stay Alive in the Woods. We went to Water Mill and gathered cattails by the Water Mill Museum. We went to Northwest Woods and gathered mussels and wild onions. We had a "survival" camping trip. I decided to eat shellfish and fish but only if I caught it.

When I was twenty, I moved in with my husband. He had his two teenage sons living with him. The boys could eat a complete dinner and still devourer peanut butter and jelly sandwiches an hour later. I was a little overweight and watched everything I ate. I started cooking for the household. One night, Ken (my husband) asked me to prepare a chicken. It was during the first year of our relationship and I desperately wanted to please him. I went to the Joy of Cooking cookbook and read the section on "all about chicken." The chicken was awful but I started eating poultry again.

In recent years we became aware that two much fat is bad for you. We started attending a gym and Ken and I went on a low fat diet. It was hard at first but eventually became a lifestyle. Ken was of the opinion that we can live on anything. Eskimos traditionally live on protein and fat. There is a new "fad" diet that is mostly fat and protein. People say they lose weight on it. I was always told that if you want to lose weight, you should stop consuming fat. That works for some people. High fat, high protein works for others. Again, it seems we can survive on almost anything.

I had the pleasure of attending one of Silvia Lehrer's Cookhampton cooking classes. Silvia is not only an excellent cook but also a good teacher. The focus was on the "Flavors of Provence." All the students worked together to produce the meal. Yes, we can survive on almost anything but it's such a joy to cook for people you love and you get the added reward of eating the food you love.

Live long, eat well and prosper!

–Kimberly Goff

years ago in dan's papers

Tim, the owner of Provision's Health Food Store in Main Street, Sag Harbor, is involved in one of the few bits of street theatre in the Hamptons. He and seven other people – all anti-nuclear advocates – performed the street theatre two weeks ago Saturday in front of the Sagaponak General Store on Sagg Main Street.

A pickup truck came down the street carrying a large five-gallon drum of, "nuclear material" strapped rather loosely on the back. The straps broke and the 'nuclear material' off and rattled loudly around, rolling in the street. The pickup stopped and some workman got out. They had hardhats, overalls, brooms and shovels and without without further ado, they began pushing the five gallon drum all over the street in a very ineffective attempt to put it back on the truck. The drum banged around noisily, Some other people handed out leaflets.

EMERGENCY EVACUATION PROCEDURES, the leaflets said on the outside. There was a drawing of Long Island showing the location of the nuclear power plant going up at Shoreham and the town of Sag Harbor to the East.. You opened the leaflet up.

Inside the leaflet read as follows: "We just wanted you to know that there was no feasible way to evacuate the eastern end." The leaflet was signed S.P.U,D., or Social Pressure Until Dismantlement.

A handsome authority figure appeared on the scene. He stood for a minute watching the workmen push the nuclear material around with their brooms and then spoke to the crowd.

"Don't worry, everything will be taken care of," he said. "But I have to leave."

He left.

Four men in tuxedoes then appeared in the street. They wore faceless and expressionless masks and had the letters N.R.C. (Nuclear Regulatory Commission) printed on their backs. They also carried signs that read THIS CAN'T HAPPEN, and paraded around for awhile singing a song entitled, "Ain't It Great to Evacuate." The banging five gallon drum made a nice accompaniment.

Finally, the men from the N.R.C., took out a large sheet with slogan NUCLEAR COVERUP printed on it, threw it over the five gallon drum and lifted it back onto the pickup. As they drove off, some small children appeared on the street and sang a final song, stating that they couldn't leave their homes and their farms and their pets. THE END. -Dan Rattiner and flamboyant coordination. Costumes were remarkable – the best this reviewer has seen by the Southampton Players – and Vay David's coiffeurs evoked period Russian flavor.

Vincent A. Doty was outstanding as the Magistrate, both in his appearance and his expressive acting.

Ken McGuire and Vay David were a remarkable team. Both individually and in tandem their comedic timing was impeccable. Even in their inability to remember words and their blind, slapstick clumsiness they bounded as a believable couple.

Kymme Napoli was a charming counterpart to Chuck Novatka. Their love scenes were played with beautiful innocence – convincing, sweet, sincere and juicy.

Jeff Schaeffer played the villain with a broad innocence reminiscent of the Addams Family. His Count Dracula cape and telltale make-up made an immediate statement. His dance across the stage with Leon was hilarious and beautifully executed, creating a tempo and a rhythm of slapstick expectancy.

Shelly Pitkin was endearing in the role of Mishkin. His characterization was humorously spiced with nonsensical jestures directed to the audience.

Supporting cast members Maggie Mariolis and Carol Sherman filled out the group scenes with zest and creative improvisation.

Performances will take place on June 23 and 24 at 8 p.m. in the Avram Theater at Southampton College.

Group for the South Fork

The Annual Benefit for the Group for the South Fork was held last Saturday night at the Siena Spirituality Center at Villa Maria in Water Mill. The Group is a very active organization, committed to protect the unique balance of natural beauty and quality of life on the East End. Not an easy task these days when growth in the Hamptons is still on the steep increase and natural beauty to many is the excellence of the work of a plastic surgeon. The large group attending was vocal in their support of the work, stopping the remarks of Robert DeLuca for strong applause. This was not the moment to bring up the concept of a HOV lane reaching to East Hampton. The setting for the event was beautiful–that being the Siena Spirituality Center. As one who passes this location several times each week, I like others, have been curious about what this Center was all about. Now that I have been there, I can say that I still don't really know because I saw no residents, but it does feel spiritual. The guests schmoozed with cocktails in one tent then into a huge tent for dinner, dancing and auction.

Shaft — Can You Dig It?

The World Premiere of "Shaft" took place last weekend at the Zeigfeld in New York City. It was really the premiere of this version of Shaft since the original movie of the same name of decades back. But this John Shaft starring Samuel L. Jackson is every degree as cool as the other John Shaft played by Richard Roundtree. The premiere and the after-screening party at Centro-Fly was truly star studded, more like those we see in Hollywood.

A Taste of the Hamptons 2000

In a breathtaking setting of fabulous gardens and greenery, the Family Service League held the 11th Annual Taste of the Hamptons at The Madoo Conservancy in Sagaponack. Guests strolled through lush gardens as they sampled sumptuous fares from over two dozen of the best East End Restaurants and sipped wine from many of the finest Vineyards in the region. The funds raised help support Family Service League programs and services on the East End of Long Island who help people mobilize their strengths and help themselves lead satisfying and useful lives. Shorelines...With Mary Foster

THE BEIGE MENACE

What is twelve feet tall and usually stands between you and a halfway decent view of the water? Reeds! Common reed or Phragmites (say FRAGMYTEES) australis, as we biologists like to call it, is an unwelcome, yet all too common inhabitant of many East End shorelines. It is a rare waterfront property owner that isn't acquainted with this horticultural bully. The scientific name for the genus, Phragmites, fittingly comes from the Greek word for hedge or fence. For those of us in the trenches, we just call it "Phrag."

Having dealt with this plant for the last decade, it wouldn't be overstating the point to say that Phrag is invasive in every sense of the word. However, just because it's invasive doesn't mean that it should be controlled at all cost; it is a native species, after all. A Colleague in Connecticut, recently published a paper documenting his discovery of Phragmites pollen in 3,000 year old marsh peat. That would put it in the region way before the hurricane of '38 or the time when many believe this plant arrived. There is some question, however, as to how the genotype (DNA) may have been altered by the introduction of plants from other parts of the world. The resultant inbreeding could have lead to the aggressive plant we see today. I'll leave that question up to the grad students at Yale who are currently trying to figure it out.

What's the big deal you say? Well, a week doesn't go by without several calls regarding reed management. My messages range from "Hey, can you come out and look at my FRAG-AH-MYTEES its growing into my marble chips..." to "....my client owns several acres on [you fill in the name] pond and he would like it removed at any cost." I can only imagine what kind of calls the environmental consultants get during the summer. The way I see it, most want to get rid of it, but few have a clue as to how to do it.

Once established common reed usually forms a dense stand excluding most other plants and making the area inhospitable to all but the hardiest of wildlife. From an ecological point of view, the invasion of a wetland by this plant is like watching time lapse footage of lava rolling down the side of volcano over an unsuspecting village. It's not all doom and gloom though. In fact, from a water quality point of view, there is probably no better plant to reside between you and the water. The huge root system willingly takes up dissolved nutrients (emanating from lawns, gardens and driveways) that otherwise could pollute surface waters. Not to mention its incredible ability to prevent erosion.

Before you get on the phone with your landscape architect and environmental consultant to start redesigning your backyard, take a breath. Prior to doing any work, you must obtain State (NYSDEC) and local (Town or Village) wetland permits and neither are easy to come by for this type of work. From the regulatory point of view, and mine I must admit, a shoreline of Phrag is better than a botched attempt at "restoration." For this reason, most resource managers on the East End, though open to replacing a pure stand of Phrag with a more diverse assemblage of native species, are all to quick to put the kebosh on your application unless you can make an ecological case for removal and assure them that what you propose can be done. Arguing that you want "a water view" isn't going to cut it.

Having sufficiently covered the disclaimers, I can honestly say managing Phrag is a significant part of my work at Cornell and I spend many a day trying to figure out how to wipe it out. I'm working on everything from use of naturally occurring fungi to grazing by farm animals. Some of my work focuses on basic research involving salinity tolerance, while the bulk of my efforts consist of applied research and demonstration projects including full-scale proactive restorations.

When it comes to control, almost anything has been tried including cutting, covering with black plastic, burning, mowing and herbicides. In my experience and according to many wetland managers on the east coast, excavation is the most efficient, but most costly method. However, if you don't get it all, you can plan on bringing the guys with the big yellow machines back in a few years. Good luck!

Antares Cafe
Brewer Yacht Yard, Greenport
477-8839

When Matt Murphy was busy impressing Kim on their first date on Fire Island with his knowledge of astronomy, he probably did not foresee just how big a part the supergiant star named Antares would play in his future. Today, Kim is engaged to Matt and together they have recently opened a new restaurant, appropriately named the Antares Café.

Matt Murphy has an extensive background with such establishments as La Colombe D'Or in Manhattan where he was the Chef and before that a sous-chef at the Russian Tea Room, the Rainbow Room and the Ritz Carlton in New York. Matt has a strongly felt love of cooking and had always had an ambition of owning and operating his own restaurant. This dream came to fulfillment at the end of last year. "We closed on the premises on December 23 and we then immediately flew to Paris where I proposed to Kim. Thankfully, she accepted and then after the appropriate celebrations we returned to New York and went into a frenzy of work to really make major changes to the building."

Antares Café is on the site formerly operated by the Salamander restaurant in the Brewer Yacht Yard in Greenport. Driving to it the other night on an evening when a massive thunderstorm was building had a strangely surreal element to it. Maybe, only in New York or perhaps, only on eastern Long Island would you be following directions to an exciting new restaurant which ended with having to negotiate between extremely large boats on hard standings, almost dwarfing the restaurant buildings.

Antares Café, as befits its waterside location has an outdoor and indoor section. The outdoor portion has some 10 tables and also some extremely effective heaters for use on evenings which may be cool, or for pre- or after-summer dining. When you walk into to the Antares Café the overall effect is of warmth and charm and this is accentuated by the welcome from Kim who hosts the room in a charmingly professional manner. The walls are painted in an intense dark red color which Matt insisted on having. Antares is a very distinctive red hued star in the constellation of Scorpius, a constellation which can be seen in the summer sky and often used for celestial navigation, so the color is both appropriate and effective.

Matthew Murphy-Executive Chef /Proprietor
Kim Pino - Proprietor

Antares Café features a menu which is designed to cater to a wide variety of tastes, always with the emphasis on using the very best of local produce and fish and going far and wide for everything else. "I lived and cooked for a while in Italy, in Tuscany and saw first hand the way that Tuscans really make use of the best and freshest ingredients. I hope it comes through in my cooking," Matt explained. "I also inherited a lot of my love of cooking from my grandmother, who lived in East Quogue and she too was insistent on using ingredients which were very fresh."

During our visit we sampled a range of the menu. Diners are always regaled before their meal with the chef's amuse bouche, the little taster designed to whet the palate for what lies ahead in the main meal. On our visit we enjoyed a Peking Duck terrine full of a myriad of flavors and promise. The tomato and sorrel soup came as a visual treat with its two constituents separated in a swirling pattern without a trace of mixing. The crisp light puffed Wonton completed the picture. The taste and light silky texture of this soup and also the Butternut Squash Soup served with cinnamon whipped cream were exceptional.

From the wide selection of appetizers we had the Trio of Mousses which were Avocado, Goat Cheese and Wild Mushroom. These were served with cheese crostinis and imparted a range of flavors. Matthew explained that the idea for this dish originated in a meal they had in Paris. Whiting is a fish which tends to be neglected but here the marriage of tangy Grapefruit and Soy Glaze brought out the best in the fish which was served on a crispy lentil wafer (or Poppadum).The lightly seared foie gras had all the intensity of flavor associated with this delicacy and it was accentuated by the accompaniment of mango and crystallized ginger. This was indeed a dish to savor.

The entrees at Antares include a traditional Bouillabaisse from the South of France but made with shellfish and fish from local waters. Rich with scallops, lobster, striped bass, clams, mussels and cod, this was not a dish for a sampling, so we tasted the Soupe de Poissons, the richly aromatic broth from this dish, redolent of the garlic, saffron, herbs and white wine used in the preparation, poured over the traditional toasted French bread spread with garlic butter and promised ourselves the treat of the full dish of Bouillabaisse at a later date.

Trout is a fish which, even at its best, can be rather light, even bland in taste but here the fillets of trout were coated with grated aged parmesan cheese quickly fried and served on a bed of shaved fennel and orange segments. The fish was perfectly free of grease and the cheese and fruit coupled with the crispy fennel shavings made a dish which was full of interesting flavor without ever being so overpowering that the delicacy and sweetness of the fish itself disappeared.

If you are a lover of gnocchi, the good news is, that from his stay in Tuscany, Matthew learned how to make exceptional gnocchi using chestnut flour, cooked with Grappa, roast tomatoes and a veal ragout. This produced a dish with flavors which were incredibly intense and satisfying. The bad news is that you may have to wait for the fall for this dish to reappear on the menu, unless they are forced to bring it back by popular demand!

Duck confit was perfectly slow cooked with the tender flesh ready to fall from the bones and the unusual use of garam masala, an aromatic mixture of spices such as cardamom, cinnamon, cumin, cloves and nutmeg, usually found as a final dressing in Indian cooking added a piquancy to this rich dish.

Desserts are equally inviting and innovative. As chocolate lovers we opted for the unmolded chocolate soufflé served with a white chocolate mousse and mint ice cream. This and the caramelized pineapple which we also tried and which was served with fresh raspberries and a custard reminiscent of a light creme brulee, together with a glass of a Muscat De Beaume de Venise and a cup of excellent coffee brought a wonderful meal to a conclusion.

Matthew Murphy imports many of his cheeses from Italy always has a selection of cheese available for those who do not want dessert or even for those who do! The wine list covers some 30 choices and has a range of Long Island, French and Italian wines to suit most tastes and pockets.

Recommendation.

Many of us have been known to star gaze but usually we are not really sure of which star we are focused on. Matthew Murphy focused on the star Antares and has turned his star gazing dream into reality as a new bright star in the restaurant firmament. The Antares Café, based on our visit and also from talking to patrons who have already become regulars diners there, is set to become one of the hottest tickets in town and to make a trip to Greenport really worthwhile, even from the extremes of the South Fork! Make a reservation and enjoy excellent food, imaginatively cooked and presented.

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

COLLECTOR CARS

There's an industrial section of buildings out here that could be called Gasoline Alley. Many of these buildings contain services for exotic cars. In one of these structures is an assortment of collector's dream vehicles that must have a combined value of many millions of dollars.

What has fascinated me is that SITTING OUTSIDE for the last two years at a few of these repair stations are some of the most desirable collector cars in the world. One car is a late fifties Mercedes-Benz 300SL convertible, in very good shape, except for the fact that it is slowly rusting away, with weeds growing around it. The other car is a circa 1980 BMW M1 mid- engine exotic that has been left to the mercy of the elements, with the paint peeling off this once beautiful and very rare machine.

Dan's Car

Abandoned 300SL (Value $100,000)

Both these cars are valuable. Even in their current condition the Mercedes is worth about $100,000 and the BMW, $60,000. I wondered what kind of owners would be so callous as to let these beautiful cars decay, and found out the following. The BMW is owned by a wealthy out-of-towner, who, like Rhett Butler, obviously doesn't give a damn about the car. The scuttlebutt on the Mercedes is that it is owned by the estate of a dead Arab Shah, who also suffers from Rhett Butler" syndrome.

Shame on both these people for letting such beautiful cars rot. When it comes to collector cars, sometimes money is truly in the wrong hands. Sadly, the cars are not for sale.

Contrary to the above situation, most cars in the Hamptons during the summer months look showroom new. Is it my imagination, or is just about everyone here driving a shiny, expensive newly hatched vehicle?

I've often contended that the Hampton's "poor" drive Porsches and Mercedes. It's the rich who drive Ferraris and Bentleys.

Then there are the few that confuse everyone by driving collector cars. To paraphase the lyrics from one of the songs in the classic Broadway musical The Boyfriend, everybody on the beach wears a bathing suit; you can't tell the rich from the poor. The same can be said about the fellow seen driving a vintage car.

To the casual observer, when one sees someone behind the wheel of a classic, it's logical to assume that it can't be his everyday car. He must have bucks, and use his other car to get back and forth to the city.

To the uninitiated, a 1955 MGTF worth about $12,000 looks basically the same as a $125,000 1939 Jaguar SS100.

To further confuse matters, there is a raft of replica cars out there, which, unless one puts a magnet to their skin to see if they are made of counterfeit fiberglass, cannot be distinguished from the expensive originals. Be suspicious of trendy looking people in Ford Cobras or Porsche Speedsters.

The point of all this is to clarify the fact that one should not judge ones worth by his wheels, because collector cars tend to confuse the normal pecking order of automotive status.

Another moot point is that collector car people have their own snobby values. Ferrari owners sneer at Porsche owners. Porschephiles snub everyone, including other Porsche owners if the numbers of their model don't start with the numerals 356 or 911. Pity the poor fledging Porsche collector wannabe who makes the faux pas of buying a 914, 944 or a 998.

Even Chevrolet and Ford collectors are at odds with each other. I've seen collectors of vintage Fords wear T-shirts that boldly state, "On a quiet night you can hear a Chevrolet rust ".

The most affable group of car collectors are the guys who collect '50's vintage British sports cars. Like their cars, these collectors have no hidden agenda. These cars were built when Britannia ruled, exporting waves and waves of charming little cars like MGs, Austin Healys, Triumphs, Lotus, and Jaguars. They were all honest cars with simple mechanics.

Take Dan Rattiner and his vintage 1959 Triumph TR-3. The car is anything but a status symbol, just a cheeky little roadster with cartoon-like looks. Dan's TR-3, which was once a wallflower, has become quite collectible over the years. Its funky looks typify and exaggerate all that was sporty about those imported English roadsters. Spindly wire wheels, cut down doors, gobs of dials on the dashboard and an impossibly hard to erect convertible top.

All these British cars shared one dependability-impaired trait; a wacko electrical system built by the infamous firm of Lucas Electronics Ltd. whose CEO was often called "The Prince of Darkness." All owners of '50's vintage British cars have love-hate relationships with their rides. It's all part of the "will it or won't it run?" charisma of the vintage British sports car. Just one of the many reasons British car owners' are considered masochists with a good sense of humor.

Dan, willingly or unwillingly, has become a member of the British sports car owners' fraternity and a bona fide car collector.

DAN TRAVELS

The Village Latch – A Southampton Gem

Think Portuguese Pousada, think Relais & Chateaux, think Great Gatsby. A Member of Elegant Small Hotels. The Village Latch Inn, a Southampton gem, was the former grand annex to the famous Irving Hotel, home to the rich and famous. To this day the Village Latch continues the tradition.

In a secluded setting behind high privet on a five-acre estate, it is one of the most unique Country House Hotels. Rated #1 in over fifty inn books from Fodor's to Frommers as one of the best places to stay in the Hamptons. It has been owned and managed for the past 30 years by Marta & Martin White.

An eclectic mix of furnishings, each room is uniquely different. Antiques and collectibles to modern furnishings. Guests choose between balconies, decks, fireplaces, duplexes or suites. The sophisticated ambiance is appreciated by celebrities such as Andre Watts, Lauren Hutton, Ethel Kennedy, Isabella Rossellini, Fran Drescher, Matt Lauer, Mayor Dinkins, Carl Bernstein, to name a few. It is also a favorite for photographic shoots, film crews, corporate groups, weddings and private celebrations. They love the idea of renting a 10-20 bedroom villa for their exclusive use.

Included is a swimming pool and tennis court, health club privileges at the Omni and American Fitness Factory. The forty room Inn and adjacent villas are always being renovated. "That's the fun of it," says Marta, who just had her fix of the day and bought 3 new upholstered chairs. "You'd think that I would be tired of the difficult job of running the Inn after so many years, but it's the creative part I love, always changing, always making better. It's a retreat that people come to, to get away from the pressures of the outside world. It's thrilling to see guests lounging on wicker chairs around rose gardens, reading The New York Times, enjoying a country breakfast on our lush lawns, seemingly without a care in the world. We didn't just renovate, we've never stopped. Once you cease giving to something it's no more fun. Our hotel has all the modern conveniences that one expects nowadays, but its a very personal environment that's hard to find anymore, anywhere."

The Whites, world travelers, just back from vacation in Portugal, Tuscany, Sardinia and Corsica. "We stay in the kind of places we ourselves have established., I almost thinking our hotel is more well-known in Europe than we are locally. Seventy percent of our guests are from around the world."

Marta was an actress and one of the first female directors in the Actors Studio for many years. She created her own theatres, and that was the beginning of seeing a building, a space, a room, as an art form.

Marta was in the arts as a commercial photographer and lighting in films so that they are both able to continue their talents in running the largest and most successful country house hotel.

"We're here six months a year, working 20 hour days. Although the inn is open year round, we are here for the busiest time of the year. We are able to travel and go to our homes in Key West. There we have time for our new interests, painting and writing. I'm working on a memoir, and maybe a book on the encounters I've had on running an inn. There's a lot of stories to tell."

To describe the place, Marta's favorite quote is in Marilyn Wood's "Wonderful Weekends." "If you can't stay in a friend's house south of the highway, the next best thing is to stay at the Village Latch Inn Hotel."

When in New York

REVIEW: THE RIDE DOWN MT. MORGAN

Arthur Miller's current Broadway play, The Ride Down Mt. Morgan, is a roller-coaster trip through the life of its main character, Lyman Felt, a super dynamo of force and ego. Miller unfolds Lyman's story in the present as well as through flashbacks and dreams. Lyman is a rogue but, since playwright Miller is a moralist, will Lyman get away with what he has done? He is a bigamist.

Patrick Stewart makes Lyman so charming and charismatic that he is almost likable. Lyman is daring, selfish, sensual, contradictory. He has an outsize ego which hungers for life experiences that interest him. "I may be a bastard, but I am not a hypocrite," he explains to his attorney.

He loves his wife of 32 years, Theodora, and his adult daughter Bessie, but he is bored and bursting with energy. The product of an Albanian father and a Jewish mother, he is a hedonist always fighting feelings of guilt. "If you try to live according to your real desires, you end up looking like a shit," he says from his hospital bed.

Lyman, a successful Manhattan insurance executive, bought into an Elmira, New York, insurance agency owned by a strong, attractive younger woman, Leah. He convinces her that he has divorced Theo. They marry and now have a son, Benjamin, who is nine. Lyman can't give up either family because, in his own way, he loves them both. His wives meet in his hospital room after he crashes his sportscar in a snow storm driving down Mt. Morgan from Elmira to Manhattan.

Frances Conroy portrays Lyman's stoic, Episcopal wife Theo with quiet dignity. She wonders, "Why does anyone stay together once they realize who they're with?" Theo is devastated by Lyman's betrayal but she handles it in her own subdued way. Daughter Bessie, well played by Shannon Burkett, does not yet have the emotional fortitude of her mother. She is furious with her father.

The second wife, Leah, is strong and independent. Actress Katy Selverstone, making her Broadway debut, shows Leah's anger for not trusting her original life plan to be happy by staying single and independent. Leah is now concerned for her son and wants her business back. Both wives are realistic and mature enough to understand eachother's positions,

John Vennema, as Lyman's straight-arrow attorney Tom, is sympathetic, puzzled and sometimes humorous as he tries to handle the situation. Lyman's African American nurse Logan, compassionately played by Oni Faida Lampley, is amused by these comfortable white people's dilemma.

The shifting minimalist set by John Arnone, contrasting light design of Brian MacDevitt and original music of Dan Moses Schreier enhance director David Esbjornson's focus on the larger-than-life Lyman. Costume design by Elizabeth Hope Clancy gives quiet clues to each character.

Arthur Miller, writing dramas for more than 65 years that engage one's sense of right and wrong, won't let the all-to-human Lyman off. But The Ride Down Mt. Morgan does not tug at the heart like the Loman family in Miller's masterful Death of a Salesman or Eddie in A View from the Bridge.

The Ride Down Mt. Morgan has a limited run at the Ambassador Theatre, 215 West 49th Street, 212-239-6200, through July 23. The play had its world premiere in London in 1991 and a brief, soldout run at the Public Theater/New York Shakespeare Festival in 1998 before opening on Broadway this April.

Shop'til You Drop.....With Maria Tennariello

What a wonderful weekend! My mom and sister Paula came out for another visit from New Jersey to spend a few shopping days with me. Believe it or not a friend of my mom's (since they were eighteen). Ida lives nearby in Hampton Bays and we decided to pick her up and take her shopping with us. Now, they know just how hard my job is. Let's shop!

We started out in Westhampton Beach, at La De Da Antiques located on Moniebogue Lane. My mom and sister were in awe of the home accessories, gifts, objects d'art, and of course the antiques. Stop by and you will see what I mean.

Nearby at Lon Sabella et Daniel you can have made to order and ready to wear special occasion clothing. Also available are the most extensive collections of accessories and signature jewelry replicas. Open daily and by appointment call 288-5988.

Of course we couldn't pass up Porch & Patio on Montauk Highway in East Quogue to check out the patio furniture and accessories. At Porch and Patio they carry a large selection of top brands in furniture, grills, accessories and more. Ida bought a Ducana stainless steel cooking surface, coal grate and burner grill for her large family that visits her almost every weekend. Ooy... By the way, free delivery throughout the entire metropolitan area. Can't beat that!

Stopping off in Hampton Bays we visited a great shop on Montauk Highway called Val's Closet. Can't find anything to wear in your closet? Look in Val's. Val's Closet offers designer clothing at an amazing discount. Look for DKNY, Calvin Klein, ABS, Easel, Laundry and many more. Stop by this weekend for the "Grand Opening Sale."

Ooops, I almost forgot to stop off at the Shinnecock Animal Hospital to make an appointment for Tino's grooming with Donna (who Tino just adores) and to pick up his Eukanuba. Dr. Hadland, Sharon, Lisa, Donna and all the staff here are wonderful, caring and personable. Thank you guys for caring about all the animals and their owners. Call 723-0500 for information and appointments.

At Edward Archer on Main Street in Southampton, look for fine men's clothing and furnishings featuring designer clothing by Brioni, Scott Barber. Ike Behar, Bruno Magli, Gran Sasso, Valentini and more.

If you're stolling through Southampton this weekend, Chez Morgan Home is having a "Tent Sale" with 50% to 70% off selected furnishings and accessories. Located on Jobs Lane, look for the sale tent behind the store. See you there!

Having a Fourth of July party? Graduation, engagement, birthday party? Hampton Party Designs, on Mariner Drive in Southampton has decorating for all parties, weddings and special events. Call 283-5533 for information about their floral design, balloons and more.

Don't forget the Antiques Shows & Sales" – Jean Sinenberg Prestige Show" on Main Street at James Lane in East Hampton this weekend, Saturday, June 24. This show will be held outdoors and under the tents, filled to the rafters with antiques and accessories.

Biba and Biba Kids will surprise you with the best clothing for women and children. Located on Newtown Lane, East Hampton and Jobs Lane, Southampton, let Biba dress you and your family from head to toe. Of course my sister bought tons of goodies for her grandson Kevin. Lucky boy!

Hey, for the person who thinks they have everything, you'll be surprised when you see the gems in Gems of the Past, located on Park Place in East Hampton.

There is one of a kind antique, estate and fine jewelry for that special person in your life. Think graduation.

Stop off at Our Glass for the grand opening, located on Main Street in Amagansett where you can enjoy blown, fused and stained glass from around the world.

Heading east to Sag Harbor, my passengers could hardly wait to get there. My mom is a big fan of Sag Harbor and loves to go window shopping. Window shopping? I wish that's all it was. I'm drawn like a magnet right into the stores and leave my paycheck behind. We headed over to The Ideal on Main Street to get some magazines and graduation cards. I found some unique picture frames for all my favorite photos. There are stationary items, the largest selection of magazines and newspapers, stuffed animals, greeting cards, you name it, they probably have it.

Nearby, DJ Hart is stocked to the Right across the street at Flashbacks, one of my favorite shops, there is so much to choose from. Unique accessories, great dresses, skirts, tops, hats, shoes, sandals, lamps, furniture imported from Bali, and so much more. I picked up a great hanging lamp with fringes on it for my daughter Michele for only $38. What a buy!

We were all so hungry and tired that a meal at Serafina on Main Street was just what the doctor ordered. Serafina has nightly specials, seafood delights, pasta from heaven and love I personally recommend the "Lobster Fest" night. Lynne and Frank certainly make you feel like you're part of their family. Located on Main Street, call 725-0101 for reservations. What a wonderful way to end the day.

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

Air Conditioners Quickly Top List Of Priorities When Temperatures Soar

Warm weather has a way of changing your priorities. According to a recent survey, when the weather heats up, homeowners consider an air conditioner more important than a television or a telephone.

Despite this necessity, nearly one in four consumers (23 percent) who bought an air conditioner describe the experience as anxiety provoking. This is especially true for women and renters.

Two-thirds of those who responded to the survey, sponsored by Carrier Corporation, say the industry doesn't provide enough information to make an informed choice, especially when it comes to determining the needed number of BTUs. Many consumers don't even know what a BTU is or what the initials EER (Energy Efficiency Rating) mean. And then there's the question of size.

It's important to install the right size air conditioner in the right space. A too small unit will not efficiently cool the place and a too large unit may cycle on and off, frequently resulting in a clammy environment.

With U.S. National Weather Service predictions promising warmer-than-normal weather this year, many consumers may welcome the existence of a web site that can help take the anxiety out of buying and installing an air conditioner.

Nearly two thirds (63 percent) of those who responded to the survey said that having air conditioning information on the Internet would make the process easier. Almost as many (58 percent) would welcome step-by-step instructions for installing a room air conditioner.

Fortunately, a new Web site created by Carrier makes purchasing a room air conditioner directly online a simple process. The Web site also offers tips on buying and maintaining an air conditioner. Following these tips should prevent shoppers from becoming hot under the collar.

Buying Tips

- Room Size: The size of your room will determine the capacity of your air conditioner. Measure accurately.
- Openings: Determine the area (length x width) to be cooled by a single air conditioner. If a room is connected to another by a permanently open door or archway more than five feet wide, consider the two rooms as one area.
- Corners: Conditioned air will not go around corners or down hallways into other rooms.
- Bigger is not necessarily better: An air conditioner with a higher BTU capacity than required may cycle on and off frequently and may not dehumidify properly.

Maintenance Tips

- Window/room units tend to be maintenance-free. About the only preventive maintenance a homeowner should do is check and clean the filter when the season starts and periodically throughout the summer.
- People living in areas with heavier amounts of traffic and soot may need to check and clean filters more frequently.
- Filters are easy to remove, clean and replace. Unplug the unit first and refer to the owner's manual for instructions.
- Most filters can be vacuumed or washed in warm soapy water and laid flat to dry. Then simply put the filter back in.
- Ensure that the unit is caulked or weather-stripped properly to prevent warm air drafts from entering the room or cool air from escaping.

Where To Get Help

To select and order a room air conditioner, and for advice on purchasing or maintaining a room air conditioner, visit www.carrier.com or call 1-800-CARRIER (1-800-227-7437).

Make The Body You Have Look More Like The Body You Want

More and more, it seems, fashion designers are taking a realistic look at the way women look and live today. In short, real women need real clothes that really fit. Here's how one fashion company is approaching the warm weather season:

"We know a woman's time is precious, and we work to make style easy for women by offering variety, versatility and value," says Geralynn Madonna, Newport News senior vice president.

- In the season of "less is best," there's no need to feel self-conscious. Shape Fx by Newport News can "make the body you have look like the body you want" by offering fashions with built-in tummy control, rear lifting bottoms and bust enhancing tops.
- If you're like many women and your upper torso is one size and your lower torso another, a solution for swimwear also exists. With the Build Your Own Bikini (BYOB) system, you can mix and match sizes, colors and styles to find the look that's right for your body.
- If you believe that you'll never find flattering jeans to wear on Casual Fridays or to simply relax on weekends, cheer up. The Jeanology jeanswear collection fits petite, average, tall and full-size women with classic and figure-fixing styles in a wide array of colors.

All these women's fashions are available at Newport News, an online and mail order catalog that offers clothes in sizes four to 24.

"As the affordably chic resource for feminine style, we offer women what they want to carry them through the season in style," adds Madonna.

If you want to learn more about these clothes, or to order a catalog, call 1-800-688-2830 or visit www.newport-news.com on the Web.

ART COMMENTARY

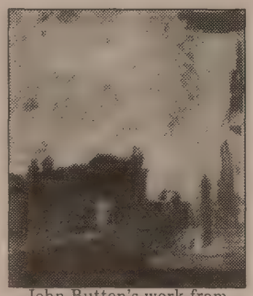
With Marion Wolberg Weiss

"TRAVELING ARTISTS" AT NABI GALLERY

While people flock to the Hamptons in increasing numbers each year, the current show at Sag Harbor's Nabi Gallery proves that other places (from Venice and Mexico to Spain and Santa Monica) hold special appeal as well. It's a credit to the exhibiting artists that the viewer can transport herself/ himself to those particlular sites without much effort.

Speaking of credit, the Nabi Gallery deserves a lot. Its low-key approach has paid off in terms of high quality shows which are curated with an eye toward both variety and similarity.

The current presentation is no exception. While there's diverse media on display (from watercolor and gouache to oil), the styles have a commonality that gives the exhibit interesting continuity. Lewis Zacks' experimentation with Impressionism is quite successful in his Venice scenes. Such images, combining subtle realization of real places along with stylization, seem more evocative than his previous scenes of local color. Moreover, there's now a welcomed sense of depth with background/foreground compositon.



John Button's work from Mexican series

Kathy Buist's abstractions are also stylized, with a hint of objective reality in her Spanish paintings. While her Santa Monica series is not particularly associated with any specific locale (at least for this critic), Ms. Buist's "Pier" brings back wonderful personal memories.

"On the Way to Toledo" appears almost surrealistic, however. We can't help but wonder if Toledo is in Spain or Ohio, the color red evoking Spain but the form suggesting open fields of the mid-west.

Younghee Choi Martin's features Southern California abstractions as well, yet her interpretations appear somehow more passionate and deeply felt Her rugged "Dorland Mountains" are particularly emotional, marked by the artist's technique.

John Button's works juxtapose all three styles previously described: Impressionism, representation and abstraction. What is interesting, however, is his choice of unexpected, arresting subject matter. For example, "Oaxaca 2" shows a non-descript landscape outside the town itself; his "Chichen Itza" does not feature a Mayan ruin at all, but figures which resemble giant cacti.

Finally, works by Joseph Bartnikowski bring us back home to Long Island, his scenes of Sag Harbor's waterfront and the East Islip Beach reminding us that life is sweetest when it's most familiar.

"Traveling Artists" will be on view at Sag Harbor's Nabi Gallery until June 27.

HONORING THE ARTIST: Michael Albert

We've all heard the following pronouncement at one time or another: art is to be consumed (meaning used and appreciated). In Michael Albert's case, such art is literally consumed, appearing on the labels of his Sir Real juices. The labels on his apple juice and lemonade integrate images of real fruit with a surrealistic touch (thus the product name, Sir Real).

The name has another connnotation, however. According to Mr. Albert, "the juices are pure and organic ("real") and are sold at speciality and health food stores."

It appears that combining art and business has given Mr. Albert an edge. "I went to New York University Business School," he explains. "I loved art, but I never thought about art as a profession at the time. I happened to come across a flyer that was advertising for a NYU graduate to represent a European company selling Ligonberry juice in the United States. I took advantage of the opportunity and with two friends worked for the company for two and one-half years."

Mr. Albert then decided he wanted to represent small American companies that were making only organic products. In 1991, he began his own business, Tri State Natural Food. Because he was committed to organic foods, Mr. Albert had quite a road to travel. Literally.

"I went to California, to Vermont, to places where products were being made that were not available in New York City, where 'Mom and Pop' items were being produced. For example, I found cocoa and garlic dressing from people in Vermont." After two years, Mr. Albert decided to take on another venture, developing his own brand, Sir Real products.

So far, Mr. Albert has been explaining the business side of his profession, but what about the labels which he creates himself? "When I was at NYU, I always did well in my art-related courses; I was serious about art," he says with vigor. "I would go to museums and galleries and then go home and draw."

Michael Albert

Mr. Albert's interest in art, however, started much earlier: "My grandmother was a painter. I would see her art in relatives' houses in Florida, and I realized that art is a gift. I took 10 paintings home with me. What can you cherish more than that?"

This family tie to art is perhaps what motivates Mr. Albert to work with his three young children (Lucy, Mary, and John) on art projects. "We do sticker montages," he says with his characteristic energetic tone.

The whole family is involved with Mr. Albert's art/ business. His wife, in fact, is an artist herself and has taught Special Education. According to Mr. Albert, she "has been there from the beginning."

Meanwhile, Mr. Albert continues to get his art "out there" with every juice he sells. "Actually, the art is a mosaic, not collage," he comments. "It's found stuff; I collect everything. I never throw anything away. I especially love to do portraits (like the photo collage of Dan on this week's cover). I go to weddings and take a roll of film, then do a Cubist-like rendering, giving it as a gift to the couple."

Nothing escapes Mr. Albert' eye or scissors. Even a cereal box has the potential to become one of his collages. "I use everything," he says. "I can't help myself."

Gone In 60 Seconds
Croupier

RANKED UP GRAND AUTO THEFT

If...and I submit a BIG IF...you like your cars, women and colors fast, you should leap into your rare, million bucks Blitz buggy (IF the glamorous thing hasn't been stolen), rev up to 50 MPH's over the speed limit (careful making that turn from the Highway onto Main Street) and pile into your local Movie Emporium for Nic Cage's recent ZOOM-BAM-BOOM! vehicle, Gone In 60 Seconds . Don't pile your car through the glass doors right down to the screen. Slowing down at the ticket booth to pay admission would be nicer. Sounds dopey? Well, fellow dirt farmers...I've just capsuled the movie for you.

HOT CARS - HOT RIDERS

Cage, born, Nicola Coppola, as forcefully underwhelming as his juvenile, newly blonded hair (including a cute, wee tuft toupee up front),occupies the front seat of those Zeals-On-Wheels Vanities with all the Latin passion for auto-eroticism of his Uncle, Francis Ford and the stand-up humorist, Jay Leno. Don't ask me how Jerry Seinfeld fits in, with his 40 or so gleaming piston ringing Chuggernauts. Obviously, a lot of folks enjoy driving lustily into dangerous erogenous zones. It hurts plenty...I gotta tell ya! AND, I love it.

STORY SPEED BUMPS CAN'T SLOW CAGE

Nic's character, in Gone , is a lovable car thief (he can disappear a car in 60 secs... more or less.) However, he's retired his criminal artistry and is teaching 4 and 5 year olds to race cars until ... DA-DUMM ! ... his kid brother will be compacted, whilst chained inside a non-compact car, into a square crunch of metal, wire, glass and flesh and bones approximately 4' x 5', unless Nic will steal 50 cars in 4 days. Of course, he can and will ...with the help of friends.. former gang members, all looking as seedy as hell, but,all Golden Globe-worthy performers. Giovanni Ribisi (his bro), Angelina Jolie (blonde, too and BA-A-A-DD), Robert Duvall (Mr. Bad Wrench), Will Patton and more! Good Guy Detective is tough-as-a-nicked-sledge, Delroy Lindo. 'Nuff said? I think you get the picture. Need I tell you ... this is another Jerry Bruckheimer (Yikes!) Production. His name strikes fear and revulsion into the hearts of small typeface newspaper critics. His largess style of glowing, glowering, fireball explosive producing, rife with dusky machismo, rankles those awaiting another Jane Austen adaptation, perhaps done from the viewpoint of a Fleet Street tabloid reporter.

BEFORE THE HALF HOUR CAR CHASE

Any added twists to this remake of the not-so-original made in 1974 by H.B. Halicki ere squeezed in by Nic. The "brother"conflict was made more of than his shifting of gears with Angelina which oddly backfires. There's a novel villain...an Anglophilic Brit, brittlely played by Christopher Eccleston ... hates anything American... loves fish and chips ... hates hamburgers. Most everyone else in the cast is a sleazy-greasy, cheese burger - fried smoker... so crusty dusty and rusty, they look like a Texarkana lynching mob led by Willie Nelson. Unfortunately, they're forced to take a back seat to the glittery cars, flaming orange in the late California sun and hip ignitions of jump-started , heart-stopping blasts of speed, splash, squalid splendor and squawking street battles ... AND, there's the world's longest car chase finale...just right for us popcorn popping - gas guzzlers.

MORE SPINNING WHEELS

Somewhere in the back of my mind, a wise guy was saying,""It's all about addiction." There's the "Automobile Thing" in Gone and there are other gambles like ..."Gambling"? You bet your life. Croupier, is a fine British film dealing with a croupier (a dealer at gaming tables) who is also a writer. He has the two faces and personas of the Jack card ... one up-side and one down-side. Gradually, the two contrasting profiles are drawn together, but, in opposition, like a Picasso. And, stranger, though both become successful (like a Picasso drawing) they never acknowledge each other.

Directed and co-written by Mike Hodges (Get Carter, a classic), the scenario spins as surely and as steadily as a roulette wheel with surprises at each turn, as the rigidly honest conscience of the croupier bends to create material to feed the needy writer. He hates addictions. So, in the end, manages to avoid addiction even to himself. He's dealt himself a winning hand. But, did he? Did you?

The Dreaming Goddess: Virtual Boutique Website

The website of the week, which officially opened on June 16, 2000, is The Dreaming Goddess.com, featuring individually painted scarves, turbans, shawls and sarong ensembles designed by Beatrice Bissell. The Dreaming Goddess specializes in the art of adorning the female body as temple, celebrating and accepting the feminine form in all its many variations.

In her studio in Forest Hills, Queens, Bissell drapes fabric on the body in a spirit of acceptance, creating designs that honor the inherent beauty in all body types. In her designs, the need to alter your body to fit a garments particular shape and size is unnecessary. Bissell's designs take the classic sarong to new and modern dimensions. She paints in vibrant colors on sumptuous silk and soft, supple cotton. Wear the cotton ones for everything from lounging around the house to going to a barbecue. Or dress the silk ones up with heals and jewelry for elegant evening wear. And of course, they are perfect resort wear.

A former dancer, Hatha Yoga instructor and Reiki healer (a form of energy healing), Bissell's designs allow unrestricted movement and the healing and loving energy of Reiki is permeated throughout each item as they are consecrated by her before she even commences to paint. The garments act as a vehicle for healing women's self image. Wrapping instructions are included and they can be styled as pleased with your own personal flare.

With the emergence of her new website, Bissell will be making her ritual salons, Invoking The Goddess, available to the public. These salons are ceremonies for women only, conducted, in your own home, by musicians and dancers. They invoke the goddess energy into your experience and your home. Bissell offers these salons to initiate women into her deepest intentions behind her creations. At the close of these gatherings she will make her entire line available for purchase to the participants as well as demonstrating the different ways to wrap her ensembles on the body. Custom orders are also available at no extra charge. To request a salon in your own home visit www.thedreaminggoddess.com and click on "Invoking The Goddess."

Narrowing The Search For Search Engines

Sometimes web searches are too vague, too specific, or simply not worth the eye strain and bad back. But the key to web-surfing data is to be as specific as possible when typing in keywords to search. For those sitting around this summer job hunting, visit Monster.com, but don't let the name deceive you. This site is complex and offers everything from interviewing tactics to job listings in your area. Planning a beach getaway? You may not have to go too far. According to the Best Beaches in the USA website, (www.petrix.com/beaches/index.html) maintained by Dr. Stephen Leatherman Professor and Director of the International Hurricane Center at Florida International University, East Hampton was ranked as the most romantic beach in the U.S. for 2000. East Hampton was also ranked number twelve on the top twenty list of best beaches, succeeded by Westhampton at number thirteen. But don't neglect the changing world. The NandoTimes (www.nandonet.com) provides24-hour updated news-based on context from the Associated Press. Browse Global, National, Sports, Political and Entertainment News, complete with photos, to keep up with today's world. No registration is necessary for browsing the site. For those aiming for larger toys, such as cars, visit the Consumer Reports website, (www.consumerreports.com) based on the publication, which ranks everything from automobiles to nail polish. But there is a catch. Through Consumer Reports, you can decide if you want to be a site-subscriber, for not all the reports on cars and electronic is free to browse. The site also provides free product recall information and links to other auto manufacturer's websites. Planning a trip to the movies? Instead of dialing up your local movie phone recording, click on www. moviefone.com. This site allows you to read movie reviews, celebrity trivia, and information on movie ratings. Look up showtimes and order tickets in advance which will be ready for you at the theatre. You can search for theatres nearest you by zip code or town name. Doing some basic research? Try Ask.com, a popular website for every day data, which breaks down your search request as specifically as possible with the help of other search engines. This site eliminates to superfluous information other engines love to toss in to drive you crazy. The more you narrow down your searches, the easier it will be to find a helpful website. Another source of information, but this time for people finding, is four11.com, a national directory, which locates people electronically. If you're driving a long distance, try mapquest.com. This site is a little scary because it can take you from any two places in the USA, simply by typing in the exact address. Most likely, your street is listed on it. Mapquest.com provides a printable map and written road instructions. Now log on and start researching.

Take Five 2000
with Jan Silver

Here comes a week of top-drawer pop and classical music, much theater, and several interesting benefits. Singer Dionne Warwick gives three performances at Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center, Bay Street Theatre debut's Jon Robin Baitz's version of Ibsen's Hedda Gabler, and Guild Hall has a performance piece created from children's writings at the Terezin Concentration Camp called The Last, The Very Last...Butterfly. Guild Hall will also host a symposium on "The Meaning of Celebrity." The benefits this weekend include one for the Children's Museum of the East End on Friday, an auction/garden party for Madoo Conservancy on Saturday, a garden tour/reception/concert for Pianofest at LongHouse Reserve also on Saturday, and a dinner dance with "gambling" for East End Hospice on Saturday. (Tickets for the jazz concert at Kaycee and Peter Jennings' home for the Bridgehampton Child Care Center are sold out.)

The popular tour of Sag Harbor's "hidden gardens" is on Saturday, rain or shine, and there are good musicians at the clubs (Phoebe Legere is back on Wednesday at the Talkhouse) plus engaging writers talking about their work, so read on for details:

Phoebe Legere at the Stephen Talkhouse on June 28

THEATER

Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theatre has just opened a new version of Henrik Ibsen's classic drama Hedda Gabler as envisioned by contemporary playwright Jon Robin Baitz. A joint production with the Williamstown Theatre Festival, the play stars Kate Burton, Michael Emerson and Harris Yulin. Performances are Wednesday through Sunday with weekend matinees. For tickets, call (631) 725-9500.

Manhattan's Pushcart Players bring their performance piece The Last, The Very Last...Butterfly, based on children's writings in the "model" Terezin Concentration Camp (first published in the book I Never Saw Another Butterfly), to Guild Hall. Most of the children were later sent to Auschwitz and killed, but this theatrical staging tries to show that the art and poetry they created will live forever. Performances are Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m. For tickets ($10-$12, $5 for students), call the Guild Hall box office at (631) 324-4050.

If you're in the mood for comedy, there are two shows to see this weekend. Southampton Players, a troupe of talented Southampton College students and community actors, present Neil Simon's Fools on Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Avram Theater at the college. Fools is a comic fable about a Russian village enslaved by an ancient curse—everyone in the village is an idiot—and a stranger has 24 hours to break the curse. Tickets ($8-$12) are available at the door. Spindletop Productions, a local professional group, performs Sam Bobrick's Hamlet II, a spoof of Shakespeare's melancholy Dane. The show plays as a dinner/theater package on Sunday and Monday evenings at Rocco's, 21 West Water Street, Sag Harbor. Dinner is served at 7 p.m. and the play begins at 8 p.m.; the tab for both is $39.95. Reservations are recommended; call (631) 725-0358.

MUSIC

A big ticket this weekend is one of Dionne Warwick's three performances at Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center. On Friday, she will debut "The Duke Ellington Songbook," a new program performed with the Duke Ellington Orchestra at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. On Saturday, it's "An Evening with Dionne Warwick," a musical trip through her hits at 8:30 p.m. For available tickets, call the WHBPAC box office at (631) 288-1500.

Southampton's Parrish Art Museum has two varied musical offerings this weekend. On Friday, the Ying Quartet will play the music of Samuel Barber, Kevin Putz and Michael Torke at 8 p.m., and on Saturday the program is "Words Set to Music." Poems by Frank O'Hara and Kenneth Koch will be sung to the music of Ned Rorem, John Gruen, Christopher Berg, Virgil Thomson and William Bolcolm. The performers are soprano Marianne Koerner, baritone Scott Murphee and pianist/musical director Alvin Novak. The program starts at 6:30 p.m. and a reception follows the performance. Call the Museum at (631) 283-2118 for ticket information.

Pianofest, the program for up-and-coming concert pianists, has its Monday "concert with commentary" at Guild Hall, East Hampton, 4 p.m. Tickets are available at the door ($10). Pianofest is also the beneficiary of a special evening at LongHouse Reserve in East Hampton this Saturday. The program begins at 5:30 p.m. with a cocktail reception and self-guided tour of the expansive and elegant gardens at LongHouse (embellished this season by Dale Chihuly's unique blown-glass sculptures). The piano recital is at 6:45 p.m., and a dinner for major benefactors follows the concert. For ticket information, call LongHouse at (631) 329-3568.

HAMPTONS NIGHTLIFE WITH CHRISTINE CARROLL

Shout out of the week goes to: Gerald Phair, sorry you're always late for work!

Did all of you ladies see the Roxbury brother out this weekend? You can't miss them, standing on line in their hot clothes getting declined from the clubs. I spotted one of them at Bobby Vans on Saturday, couldn't get into NV again I guess!

Well, I finally got a tattoo! No, it was fake, but has anyone seen Al Zelenka, the tattoo man, at Neptunes every Saturday? He does wonderful work. Six of my girlfriends and I went under the marker after a few beers and woke up the next day wondering what in the world happened.

I still haven't made it to NV but I promise I will this coming weekend. It is just really hard to get so many people together when there are so many places out here to go to.

Flavin Exhibit in Bridgehampton

Throughout the summer until September 10, 2000, The Dan Flavin Art Institute, Bridgehampton, New York, will present "Icons, 1961-1963" and "Dan Flavin: Nine Works". Maintained by Dia Center for the Arts, The Dan Flavin Art Institute is located on Corwith Avenue off Main Street. Hours are Thursday through Sunday, 12 noon to 6 pm; suggested contribution $3.

A series of early works by the artist will be presented in a summer long exhibition, "Icons, 1961 – 1963,"which combines painted boxes with attached fluorescent and incandescent lights. The pieces are significant, not only as first manifestations of the artist's enduring preoccupation with the aesthetic applications of simple forms and electric light, but as telling precursors to the oeuvre, he later developed based on new combinations and arrangements of fixtures and colors.

On permanent view in the second-floor gallery is an installation in fluorescent light by the artist. Consisting of nine works from the years 1971-1981, this installation was planned and completed in 1983 by Flavin for the Bridgehampton space. It has since been maintained by Dia Center for the Arts for public viewing each summer.

In addition to maintaining the Dan Flavin Art Institute in Bridgehampton, Dia has supported Flavin's work in other ways since 1974. The institution has commissioned site-specific installations in Marfa, Texas; Grand Central Station, New York City; and, most recently in 1996, the staircases of Dia's main exhibition facility at 548 West 22nd Street, New York City. Dia's permanent collection also includes over 40 additional works by this renowned American artist, a selection of which will be featured in a long-term installation at Dia's new museum in Beacon, New York, scheduled to open in 2001.

Dan Flavin was born in 1933 in New York City, where he later studied art history at the New School for Social Research. From 1963, he exhibited nationally and internationally. He lived and worked for most of the last 20 years of his life in Bridgehampton and Wainscott. Flavin died on November 29, 1996.

Dia Center for the Arts is a tax-exempt charitable organization. Established in 1974, the organization has become one of the largest in the United States dedicated to contemporary art and contemporary culture. In fulfilling this commitment, Dia sustains diverse programming in visual arts, poetry, education, and critical discourse and debate.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

It is doubtful that one would ever find a cold pasta salad in Italy. Italians do not seem to approve of them. In fact they frown upon them. Yet cold pasta salads are ubiquitous in the deli departments of supermarkets and gourmet specialty takeout shops in the United States.

"I would love to have a cold pasta salad recipe for summer entertaining", requested one of my cooking class students recently. My answer to her request is that there are only two or three that I would prepare. And mostly for the same reason - they work well for a do-ahead summer buffet, whether at a luncheon, a barbecue or a picnic.

Penne with sun-dried tomatoes, fresh leaves of basil and sweet red onion unify into a satisfying whole. The strength of feta cheese with orzo, the rice shaped pasta, is complimented with a dressing of sweet red pepper, scallion and cherry tomatoes. Another favorite cold pasta salad is fusilli al pesto. The components of a well made pesto puree of fresh basil, garlic, pignoli nuts and Parmesan cheese is deliciously retained by the corkscrew shaped pasta.

These are ideal dishes for summer entertaining as they can all be completely made ahead. Refrigerate them overnight then serve at room temperature.

COLD PENNE AND SUNDRIED TOMATO SALAD

Imported sun-dried tomatoes marinated in oil and packed in jars are delicious, ready to use and available.
Serves 10-12 on a buffet

1 pound imported commercial penne or rigatoni
Coarse salt for cooking water

1/2 cup sun-dried tomatoes in oil
2 tablespoons liquid from jar of sun-dried tomatoes
1-2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
1 large red onion
15-18 fresh basil, washed and cut into thin strips
1 tablespoon fresh oregano leaves or 1 teaspoon dried
1 tablespoon finely chopped Italian-flat-leaf parsley
Coarse salt
3-4 tablespoons freshly grated Parmesan cheese

1. Bring 4-5 quarts water to a boil and add salt. Put in pasta all at once, stirring to separate. Return immediately to a boil and cook, at a rolling boil for 8-10 minutes, or until tender but firm to the bite. Stir occasionally to keep pasta from sticking.

2. Meanwhile, cut the sun-dried tomatoes into thin slivers and put into a mixing bowl. When the pasta is done drain under cool running water. Then give the colander a good shake or two before spreading the pasta on a clean kitchen towel to absorb excess moisture. Put in the mixing bowl with the tomatoes.

3. Peel and halve onion; cut flat side down into paper-thin slices. Soak in a bowl of cold water for 15-20 minutes then drain and squeeze dry in a clean kitchen towel. Add to pasta in bowl with remaining ingredients. Toss gently to distribute all the ingredients and to coat the pasta. Taste for salt, pepper, oil, herbs and cheese to adjust seasoning if necessary. Transfer to a serving bowl, scatter additional leaves of basil for garnish and serve at room temperature.

To Prepare Ahead: Prepare up to 2 days ahead. Refrigerate, covered with plastic wrap until ready to serve. Transfer to a plastic (Tupperware) container with an airtight cover if taking to a picnic.

Reprinted from Silvia Lehrer's Cooking at Cooktique, Doubleday.

ORZO SALAD WITH SWEET PEPPER, FETA AND BLACK OLIVES

Buy a pound or two of the Greek orzo, spread on a jelly roll pan and toast in a 350 degree oven for 8-10 minutes. Toasting the pasta gives it a nuttier flavor. Store in an air-tight container until ready to use.

Serves 10-12 on a buffet

For the pasta
2 tablespoons coarse (kosher) salt for the cooking water
1 pound orzo, toasted

Dressing
1 large red bell pepper, rinsed, trimmed, deseeded and diced
1 bunch scallions rinsed, white and light green parts only, thinly sliced
1 cup cherry tomatoes, rinsed and halved
1/3 cup julienne of basil leaves
1/3 cup extra-virgin olive oil
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1/2 pound feta cheese, crumbled
1 cup Greek black olives pitted and halved

1. Bring 4-5 quarts water to a boil and add salt. Put in pasta all at once, stirring to separate. Return immediately to a boil and cook 8-10 minutes, depending on the brand until al dente, or firm to the bite. Stir occasionally to keep pasta from sticking. Drain under cool running water, then give the colander a good shake or two before spreading on a clean kitchen towel to absorb excess moisture. Transfer to a large bowl.

2. In a separate bowl, combine diced sweet pepper, scallions, tomatoes and basil. Dress with oil and season with salt and pepper to taste. Toss gently to mix.

3. Add the salad ingredients to the pasta and toss to mix thoroughly. Add olives and crumbled feta cheese and gently mix in. Serve at room temperature.

To Prepare Ahead: Follow steps 1-3 up to one day ahead. Refrigerate, covered in a suitable container. Before serving, transfer to a serving bowl and serve at room temperature.

FUSILLI AL PESTO

Pesto is the classic puree of fresh basil leaves, garlic and pignoli nuts with olive oil and grated Parmesan cheese. Fusilli, a short, corkscrew-shaped pasta retains the sauce very well and makes a tasty, cold pasta dish for warm weather entertaining.
Serves 10-12 on a buffet.

Dining IN THE HAMPTONS

Driver's Seat
62 Jobs Lane, Southampton
283-6606

The quiet elegance of a Sunday morning in Southampton is enhanced by a stop at The Driver's Seat. For 25 years of continuing excellence, this restaurant in the heart of the village is a landmark, defining what the East End is supposed to be. Whether you enter from their patio dining area or through the bar, the aroma of fine cooking assures you that your meal will be memorable, delicious and the entire experience satisfying.

Last Sunday morning, I sat in their rear brick patio dining area, enjoying coffee and conversation with Paula Mastrangelo, manager of The Driver's Seat. "Consistency" is the secret of the restaurant's success. "If we served you a great meal ten years ago, you know that same meal is waiting for you today."

In a business marked by constant turnover in staffing, well seasoned veterans prepare and serve. The same chef has been delivering sizzling steaks to their tables for over 20 years. Tom, the front bartender, has been serving his Bloody Marys and frozen specialties for 22 years. (His secret is "precision and passion, not too much of any one ingredient." Personal choice for best drink - Strawberry Daiquiri) Pedro, the 10 year newcomer, prepares the famous Baked Clam en casserole. Fresh clams, bread crumb, parmigon cheese, celery, basil, herbs and spices fill a baking dish and then is broiled to crisp perfection. This signature dish, along with a Specials Board, make The Driver's Seat a destination on any trip out of the house.

If Steve, another longtime chef, was to take some food home at the end of a shift, it would not be the tasty and sweet barbecued St. Louis Ribs prepared each day. It also would not be the delicious variations of swordfish or local flounder that is created daily. "You have to check the Specials Board," for there, the creative juices of the team of experienced chefs explode. During the slower days of a East End winter, Steve's Specials feature homestyle dishes, containing 17 different ingredients.

During the crush of hot summer crowds, simpler dishes come from his "regionally eclectic" mind. On this Sunday, diners were to be treated to a fresh fruit platter with cottage cheese and yogurt, avocado stuffed with chicken salad or a grilled tuna with a vegetable primavera. Steve likes to peek out of the kitchen to see the general mood of the crowd. He's thrilled that The Driver's Seat's recipe for success, "still works after 25 years. At the end of the day, it,s good to know you did a good job."

The central location and landmark status of The Driver's Seat makes it a meeting place for all. The after-beach crowd hangs near the blenders of the outdoor patio bar, slurping the Margaritas, Pina Coladas and Mudslides. Late night cocktails usually begin a night of Hampton,s clubbing. Weekday and weekend Happy Hours bring in huge, boisterous crowds. Sunday means unique Bloody Marys and amazing Mimosas served with the brunch.

My brunch choice was the Challah Bread French Toast, with a deliciously dangerous side of crispy bacon. Other morning diners on the brick outdoor patio devoured the oven baked Quiche or the Spinach, Roasted Pepper and Havarti Omelet. A few savored the Eggs Benedict. All enjoyed the beautiful setting, a sunny slow Southampton Sunday, sitting beneath green umbrellas, near an ivy covered wall.

Everyone is a celebrity," according to The Driver's Seat manager Paula. Whether they are local businessmen enjoying award winning sandwiches, or tourists hungry for an East End experience, once you enter this establishment, the food, family atmosphere and Hampton flair make The Driver's Seat the restaurant of choice. Reservations are never needed and the wait usually is 30 minutes or less. Make this landmark on Jobs Lane a regular stop on your next dining adventure.

BEDELL AND COREY CREEK WIN RAVES FROM WINE SPECTATOR – So you still don't believe North Fork wines are ready to compete with the big guys? Pick up a copy of the June 15 Wine Spectator and check out Thomas Matthews critique of the '95 Bedell "Cupola" and the '98 Corey Creek Reserve Chardonnay. He awarded the '95 Cupola 90 points, calling it "rich, ripe and well defined" and rated it one of the top two best wines in a review of almost 90 wines from 31 producers! According to Matthews, "Long Island, especially the North Fork, has clearly emerged as the regional leader in the eastern United States . . . Long Island topped every varietal category in the tasting." The '98 Corey Creek Reserve Chardonnay received 88 points and was cited as, "firm, polished and well structured." How do you like them grapes?!

NEW AND NOW OPEN – Cerulean Restaurant (329-5550) is the new 40-seat eatery operating out of East Hampton's 1770 House this summer. Chef Cybele Cuzon's menu is the perfect aprés beach offering for a day in the tropics or the Hamptons. Her selections principally feature seafood and offer a unique marriage of eclectic and vibrant flavors with tropical Asian undertones.

Veteran chef Riccardo Traslavina has opened Riccardo's Seafood House with a menu that features seafood with a South American twist. The restaurant offers outdoor dining with a beautiful view overlooking Three Mile Harbor in the Springs area of East Hampton. The Snowflake Café (329-7867) has re-opened for the season. After extensive renovations, the new Snowflake Café serves breakfast, lunch, and dinner featuring "light bites" all day long. They have added cappuccino, mochacino, latte, espresso and a new juice bar with fresh juices and smoothies. A wide variety of ice cream, frozen yogurt, sorbet and special desserts is available as well. Station Road (726-3016) in Water Mill recently opened under the ownership of veteran Hamptons restaurateur Dean Golden. The 45-seat restaurant features American fusion style cuisine and a separate, adjacent vintage club car that will serve as a casual lounge. Carol Covell manages the front of the house and chef Tim Smith heads the kitchen.

PARADISE CAFÉ HAPPY HOUR – Sag Harbor's new Paradise Café (725-6080) has a daily happy hour from 5 tc 6:30 p.m., with two-for-one drinks. And the Paradise building is also home to BookHampton's newest store so you can browse the shelves before or after your liquid refreshments.

TIERRA MAR'S LATIN DANCING AND TAPAS & PAELLA PARTY – Tierra Mar (288-2700) offers special dance instruction accompanied by Spanish fare every Thursday evening. Oscar Gonzales teaches traditional Latin dances throughout the evening. A few special Spanish dishes are offered in the main dining room: Paella Valencia (chicken, calamari, shrimp, mussels, clams, chorizo, fresh vegetables and saffron rice) and an a la carte tapas menu featuring typical Spanish appetizers from $3 - $9 per plate.

PACIFIC EAST PRIX FIXE – Pacific East (267-7770) is now offering a nightly three-course prix fixe. The special is $19.99 per person plus tax and gratuity and is available from 6 p.m. - 7 p.m. daily and all night Sunday. The menu includes choices like Miso Dashi Hot Pot with eastern baby vegetables and Bangkok Fish Cakes for appetizers and such entrees as Grilled Atlantic Salmon, Roasted Free Range Chicken and Grilled Key West Mahi Mahi. Call for more information and reservations.

THE DISH HEARS THAT . . . . . . the percussive talents of EH Town supervisor Jay Schneiderman are regularly on display at the NV nightclub. The Supervisor/drummer has been revving up the dance floor with his live drumming sessions over the pulsating dance beat.

1/2 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese

For the pasta
1 pound fusilli pasta
Coarse (kosher) salt for the cooking water
2-3 tablespoons pasta cooking water
Fresh basil leaves for garnish

1. Wash basil leaves and gently pat dry. Lightly pack into a measuring cup. Put into the workbowl of a food processor, fitted with steel knife or in a blender. Add the garlic, pignoli nuts, salt and pepper, and pulse with several on/off turns or blend until ingredients are finely chopped. Scrape mixture down sides of bowl with a rubber spatula as necessary.

2. Through the feed tube of processor or opening in cover of blender, add the oil in a slow steady stream until mixture is smooth. Be careful not to over process. Can be prepared ahead to this point.

3. Meanwhile, bring 4-5 quarts water to a boil and add salt. Put in pasta all at once, stirring to separate. Return immediately to a boil and cook 8-10 minutes, depending on the brand, until al dente. Stir occasionally to keep pasta from sticking. (Just before draining, ladle out 2-3 tablespoons cooking water for the pesto.) Drain under cool running water, then give the colander a good shake or two before spreading the pasta on a clean kitchen towel to absorb excess moisture. Add the cooking water to soften the pesto then stir in the butter and grated cheese.

4. With a rubber spatula, scrape the pesto over the pasta in the bowl and toss to mix until the pasta is thoroughly coated with the sauce. Transfer to a serving bowl and serve at room temperature with sprigs of fresh basil for garnish.

To Prepare Ahead: Follow steps 1 and 2 up to several days ahead or freeze in a suitable container. Complete steps 3 and 4 up to one day ahead. Refrigerate, covered and serve at room temperature with garnish.

Dining IN THE HAMPTONS

Cafe Amici
1580 North Highway, Southampton
283-3111

Wonder where to eat on the way to or from the city? Where to go before or after the movie when most restaurants have stopped serving? Would you like to sit in a little garden having a perfect dinner, a light appetizer with a glass of wine, or perhaps a soup too delicious to even imagine? Well, you are now in luck. Café Amici, open almost 2 months, presents all these opportunities as well as a beautiful setting with comfortable and elegant air conditioned dining.

Café of Friends sums up the attitude and ambiance of this lovely and hospitable restaurant. This is the type of homey restaurant where customers return for years and always leave satisfied. Remember when customer service was expected? Here Owner Paul Colosi and Chef Scott Nordek never forgot.

During their five years together at Pappazio's in Bayside 75% of the clientele were regulars. It's easy to see why. At Cafe Amici the management they've brought to South Hampton cares what you think and caters to your tastes. Literally. Flexibility is key; dining here is not a rigid "no substitutions"experience.

Scott, who spent a year as chef at George Martin in Rockville Centre, enjoys circulating among the diners as they savor the food and asks for feedback, always open to new ideas. These are people who respect themselves for offering the best and respect their customers for appreciating it. The menus, overflowing with temptation, keep pace with current trends like fewer heavy sauces but never lack flavor or originality.

Soup specials change daily. We were lucky enough to be there on Italian Mushroom Soup and Lobster Bisque Day. The mushroom soup was an absolute textural treat. The mushrooms, like all the ingredients here, are both fresh and as local as possible. There are also vegetables, vermicelli, and a delicious broth, making this soup delightful on every level. The lobster bisque was delicate, creamy, light and delicious. The lobster flavor was apparent but so was the freshness of all natural ingredients.

We shared two appetizers among the four of us and could only decide that we liked both of them best. The baked and moist Little Neck clams with fresh lemon butter were wonderful and full of flavor, less overshadowed by the stuffing than in many restaurants, while the warmed fresh bococcini (knots from the mozzarella which is made on the premises) wrapped in proscuitto and served with sundried and roma tomatoes was heavenly. The flavors and textures all played off each other. Warming the proscuitto brought out its real essence. What an introduction to the entrees. Every dish is visually presented with an 'artist's palette; no sense is left unserved.

Of course a traditional Italian meal, even one featuring "Progressive Italian Continental" cuisine, includes pasta. We had a house special which included shrimp and chicken in a light and lovely filleta di pomodoro sauce. The sauce brings harmony to all these ingredients but never overpowers. This could even be enjoyed without the chicken and shrimp because the blending of flavors into the pasta and vegetables is the real treat of this dish. Other pastas include mixed seafood, spinach and mushrooms, linguini in clam sauce, and vegetables in traditional or new sauces that all sound like they should be ordered immediately.

Cafe Amici features a fresh Atlantic Salmon chefs daily special. Our night featured a Nut Crusted Salmon, panseared, in a sauce of amaretto and buerre blanc, over a bed of basil and garlic mashed potatoes. The nutty crust provided a wonderful taste to the salmon, which was done to perfection. The sauce was slightly sweet and thoughtfully prepared. All entrees include vegetable and new potato, and Scott seems to have an endless stream of potato recipes. A good thing to have in the Hamptons. We also tried the lightly breaded grilledchicken cutlet. The grilled chicken pieces were under a drizzle of balsamic vinegar dressing and set amid a bed of lovely vegetables. I felt healthier just looking at it; eating confirmed it. This food is good for you. Other entrees include veal, shrimp, and beef in simple styles with great appeal and flavor.

Dishes are all a la carte and servings quite ample. Prices range from $18 to $28 for entrees. Cafe Amici is open from 5:00 PM until 10:00 on weekdays and until 11:00 on weekends. A wonderful thing to know about for those who enjoy late night lingering moonlit meals. The owners are considering music for the intimate and pretty garden dining area. It would be a perfect touch. It's a great way to begin or end your weekend as well as a delight midweek.

It's Our Garden WITH ELIZABETH AND CROW MILLER

Taking good care of your pepper plants is half of the ripeness equation. Don't heed the common myth that you can get ripe fruits sooner by withholding water or otherwise stressing your pepper plants. The truth is that stressed plants won't bear nearly as many peppers as well—tended ones will and the peppers you do get won't be as large or thick-walled as they could have been.

The key to good pepper care is keeping the plants well fed. Just how much you'll need to feed them depends on your specific soil conditions. Have your soil tested, Don't guess. Peppers need the three basic food group of gardening: Nitrogen (N), Phosphorus (P), and Potassium (K). Nitrogen to grow big and sturdy plants with lots of leaves, Phosphorus for flowers and fruits, and potassium for strong roots.

Nitrogen (N), peppers definitely need some, but if you give them too much your plants will make leaves instead of fruit; you will delay the peppers from ripening to their final, fruitful color; the fruit that you do get will be watery, have less sugar and be more susceptible to rotting after being harvested. But don't be scared. Here's how to give nitrogen to your peppers wisely: You want to put at least half of all the nitrogen that you feed a pepper right in the soil at planting time. Give the plant the other half of its nitrogen when it sets its first batch of fruit.

Nitrogen washes out of the soil easily, which is the reason for that second application. The first hit of nitrogen got your pepper plant off to a good strong start and the second application ensures that enough leaves will form to protect those precious baby bells from a bad case of sunburn.

Phosphorus (P) is a vital, fruit-producing nutrient whitch is highly insoluble in the soil, meaning that it doesn't leach very much. So just work it into the hole at planting time, putting it right where those pepper roots will be able to get it. Feeding your peppers most of their phosphorus (P) right at the beginning helps them flower and set fruit earlier.

Potasiu .1 (K), unlike phosphorus, this nutrient leaches easily from the soil so you want to be sure your peppers get some at planting time and then some more when you make that second feeding of nitrogen, once the first fruits have appeared.

If your soil is in good shape already, providing this organic fertilization is pretty easy. Composted manure, for instance, is an excellent way to get your peppers off to a good start.

What kind of composted manure should you feed your peppers?

That depends on what's available. We spread about an eight inch layer of composted rabbit manure on our pepper planting area and till it in. If your soil is really poor, you may want to temporarily turn to one of the many blended organic fertilizers on the market while you build that soil up. All fertilizers are marked with 3—numbers that represent, in order, nitrogen (N), phosphorus (P) and potassium (K); for the first feeding, you want a high middle (P) number, and lower (N) and (K) numbers: 3—5-3 for example. For that second feeding, when the plants have just set their first fruit, you want a ratio around 7-3-5

Cool nighttime temperatures are the bane of peppers. In fact, you should start worrying about cool nights long before frost is a factor. When temps are predicted to dip down to around 50°F, we cover our peppers with 2 layers of row-cover fabric. With a single layer, we get only 2-4 degrees protection, but with a double layer, we get 8-10 degrees.

We permanently anchor our two covers along the north side of our beds so that they're always in place when we need them. We deliberately anchor the south side poorly, so that the covers are sort of automatically removed by morning breezes. They have to be lifted off during the day anyway.

When harvesttime arrives, be sure to harvest the very first fruits that the plant sets as soon as they turn color. This will encourage the plant to set more fruit.

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

The annual "wrap-up" of the state legislative session is always an amazing process. From the Governor's State of the State message until the state budget is finished, there is little legislative activity to speak of. After the state budget is resolved, the legislature gets busy with well over a thousand bills that get introduced each year. Farm Bureau believes in the two party system – Republican and Democrat, per se – but in reality, it is really majority and minority. It is very difficult for minority members of either the Assembly or Senate to get a bill moved and passed.

My job at the end of session is to try to get the support necessary to pass bills we would like to see passed and stop bills that the Farm Bureau believes to be detrimental to our membership. I spent most of the last two weeks in Albany working with New York Farm Bureau staff on a host of issues, including labor, pesticides, taxes, Soil & Water Conservation, and horse boarding. I spent a great deal of time on the Agricultural Environmental Management (AEM) legislation, which is a Governor's program bill. AEM creates a state-sanctioned, voluntary, incentive-based approach to assist farmers in implementing best management practices on their farms. There was also a companion bill for Soil & Water Conservation Districts that provides liability indemnification for districts working on approved state programs. Both of these bills passed the Senate on Tuesday night and in the Assembly in the wee hours of Thursday night. Both of these bills were Farm Bureau priorities. I feel proud to have played a part in getting these bills passed. The next step – the Governor signing the bill into law.

When we weren't working the AEM bill, we were spending considerable time in the Senate side, dealing with a variety of labor bills, including minimum wage, disability, day of rest, and overtime. The Senate did not quite finish their work on the labor issues and recessed until this Thursday. The Assembly did not finish their work either, and are supposed to be back in Albany on Monday or Wednesday.

The other big issue still not resolved is the neighbor notification bill. This has been around for the last six years. Each house passed different bills and they have not been able to agree on language. LIFB believes current law already protects our citizens. The perception issues surrounding pesticides are always front and center on Long Island. When I cross over the Tappan Zee Bridge, all of a sudden those issues are non-existent. Long Island has been and will always be a hotbed of civic and environmental activism. While we Farm Bureau guys and gals do our thing in Albany, there are equally as many advocates on the other side of our issues making their points. That is a good thing as it ensures that the democratic process works!

Joseph Gergela III is executive director of Long Island Farm Bureau

If You Can't Be At Your Mansion, Estate Property Managment Can

Another day, another mansion. Estate Property Management is on the job again. We are South of the Highway and this morning consists of numerous calls to the owner overseas to narrow down the right trees for the landscape project plus co-ordinating the new irrigation system. Can't forget the schedule for the owners arrival and arrangements for transportation.

Then it's down the block to check in the carpenter's handmade doors and the arrival of their wine shipment. The cleaning service has been here and gone. The house spotless and the classic Mercedes is being dropped off from its schedule servicing. The gardener is installing the new garden and meeting with the landscape architect. Across town, by the beach, the painters are finishing up and newly upholstered furniture will be delivered soon. The finishing touches for the dinner party tonight are being finalized. The cell phone rings (the twentieth time this morning) and another owner is so pleased with he cook the E.P.M. secured for him that he would like a nanny of equal caliber. No problem. A call is made and two hours later the meeting between owner and nanny is being scheduled.

And that's just the morning. The day will continue with e-mails, faxes and calls from not just around the country but around the world. Estate Property Management has turned management of Fine Homes and Estates into a Fine Art, leaving the oweners with the leisure time that they came out for in the first place.

First off, how does one learn to schedule, co-ordinate and generally call the shots on multi-million dollar properties. Well it helps when you've spent the last twelve years of your life as a caretaker/manager/major domo/ personal assistant, working on some of the most prestigious properties in the Hamptons (no names pleaase). Or you worked as the personal driver for a very famous director (again no names please). James Nicolino president of Estate Property Management, has the ecperience that you can't learn in school or from any other business. "This business is unique in that you are inside the homes of some of the most perful and influential people. You learn what makes them tick, their likes and dislikes. They want to relax and not be bothered by all the actibity. They expect peace and quiet and everything that was supposed to be done to be done. We have to be a step ahead of what their needs are at all times and deliver service that is nothing short of excellent." But, you say, this is the Hamptons, a place that is notorious for the "we'll get to it when we get to it" attitude. Actually, that's not true, it's more of a mette rof overlad wheneveryone comes out at one time and wants it done now the local people here are some of the hardest working anywhere." So how does E.P.M. bypass the overload."I am aligned with only the best conpanies that can handle what I throw at them. They understand the degree of service that is expected of them and they deliver-consistently.

Mill Pond Has A Third Nine

The Mill Pond golf course just opened their third nine, the North course. Also, their driving range is now fully operational.

Located at 30 East Bartlett Road in Middle Island, Spring Lake offers 27 holes of championship golf. The driving range is grass, one of the last few remaining on the Island. Directions to the club are fairly simple. From exit 64 on the LIE proceed north on Rte 112 until you reach Middle Country Road. Turn right on Middle Country and go east (approx. 4 miles) until you reach Bartlett Road. Then turn right on Bartlett. This will lead you to the entrance for the club.

Spring Lake offers a 9-hole par 38 course, the Sandpiper. The 18-hole par 72 course is the Thunderbird. From the men's tees the total yardage is 6455. From the championship tees the course is a whopping 7048 yards. This writer played the course from the men's tees. Spring Lake still allows metal spikes, but encourages use of soft spikes. The layout of the course is really beautiful. Good use of the variations in the landscape make for a challenging round as well as an enjoyable walk through the course. The overall condition can be summed up in one word: pristine. The greens are well groomed. They are not too soft and not too firm. The fairways are in immaculate shape. With everything in bloom there is a magnificent display of lush greenery. The first hole on the Thunderbird is a 438 yard par 4 dogleg right that continues slightly uphill the entire way. The hole plays longer than it looks.

A mounded fairway bunker on the right sits out around 210 yards and requires a drive of 225 yards plus to carry it. Trees line the entire right side tee to green. The green slopes uphill from front to back with traps covering the right side. The second hole allows for some recovery. A short 340-yard par 4 only offers resistance with a water hazard the first 120 yards down the left side. A dry gully stretches for another 100 yards after the water. The green slopes uphill left to right with sand guarding the green in the right front.

The signature hole of the course is number three. A large, distinctly elevated green 180 yards away has water on the left side of the hole. The left front of the green is protected by a large sand trap while a second trap sits at the right rear. Water appears again off to the right of the green. This hole plays a solid 215 yards from the blues. The elevation and distance adds 1-2 clubs for the shot. This is not for the squeamish, but certainly rewarding if you get a "greenie." The fourth hole is the second longest at 07 yards. It is a par S with a 90-degree right turn for the last 80 yards. The first 250 yards has a forgiving landing area. From there the hole narrows down among the trees. At 400 yards a good sized trap sits right on the corner. This forces you to stay down the left side for your shot. If you are short on your 2nd shot then you will have to clear the trap and the trees to the right in order to find the green. The green is well protected by 2 bunkers front left and right leaving a thin gap to the apron. Clearly the number 1-handicap hole on the course and rightfully so. Number 5 is a welcome relief. A 339-yard par 4 with a 90-degree left turn after 220 yards. The last 140 yards is straight In with a pair of traps on either side of the green, which runs uphill away from you. The sixth hole is a rewarding 154-yard par 3 with a little sand left and right of the green. When you walk up you will see a large swell in the middle of the green. The seventh hole is a sneaky 420-yard par 4. Sneaky because water on the left is reachable at about 240 yards. The right side is tight with trees and a mounded fairway bunker catching 21 0-yard drives. The only respite is a very large unguarded green. Number eight measures 381 yards but plays 20-40 yards more. It is open on the right side of the fairway but the left is blocked by the tree line and a trap at 190 yards. The green is surrounded by sand with only a narrow opening in the front.

The ninth hole is the third longest at 594 yards. A slight dogleg right with trees hugging the right side and a bunker blocking the turn at 185 yards. If you hit your drive dead straight 230 yards you will find yourself in the woods. In order to clear these obstacles you must steer your drive down a fairly narrow chute. Your second shot is unobstructed with plenty of landing,

DOGGIE DISH

One of the biggest concerns owners have, is the subject of housebreaking and which methods are the most effective. Housebreaking a pup is a defined procedure that I will simplify due to publishing limitations.

There are two commonly used methods. One of these methods has become popularly known as "crate training", and the other, more familiar and somewhat older method of housebreaking is "paper training".

"Crate training" means confining your puppy to a crate just large enough for him to stand, turn around and lie down comfortably. Most dogs will not pee or poo in their crate and therefore it is easy to teach your pup to have control over his bodily functions for at least a few hours at a time in the beginning. This means sticking to a schedule of when he eats and drinks, sleeps and plays, and of course when he goes out to pee and poo. Unfortunately, the crate method is viewed by many as cruel and unusual punishment. However, when an owner comes home to find soiled and chewed rugs, couches and other assorted household items, the result may be more cruel than confining the puppy in the first place. Too many untrained dogs become residents in shelters or even worse are abused or abandoned. If you do not think of the crate as a bad thing- the dog will eventually consider it "his room" and find comfort and safety there.

"Paper training" means confining your pup to a small area about 4 feet by 6 feet- usually the kitchen works well. This entire area should initially be covered with newspaper. As time goes on the amount of paper is reduced. Whichever method you use, your dog should be confined if you cannot keep your eyes on him. After your pup has relieved himself, he should be allowed to have "supervised" free time to play. Consider the pros and cons before you decide. Keep in mind that paper training does not teach your dog to have control, which is the main ingredient in the recipe for housebreaking.

Which method do I recommend? Whichever method fits into your lifestyle. If you are inconvenienced and frustrated, whichever method you choose will not work well anyway. Which method do I prefer? Crate training and going outside—of course when done properly under the guidance of an experienced trainer.

Remember this: no being is as capable of loving or more eager to please than a dog!

Dear Jenna,

My husband and I will be traveling from the city to the Hamptons with our two Goldens every weekend this summer. Do you have any suggestions?

Kate,
Chelsea

Dear Kate,

Remember to pack your dogs regular food and bring some water for the trip. If you think they may need some help to relax or they may get car sick, consult your veterinarian. An absolute must are Identification Tags. It may be necessary to make up a new set for traveling that have a cell phone or beeper number. Think about registering with a national lost pet service that offers 24 hour a days toll free numbers. Bring health certificates and veterinary records in case of emergency. For safety reasons- for you, the driver, and your dogs- use some kind of restraint. A crate, vehicle barrier or seatbelt restraint is for everyone's protection. Take along some of their favorite toys and treats. If you're planning to stay in a hotel or motel, make sure to call in advance. If you make a stop on the way, please remember how hot it will get in the car, in only a short time. Have a safe and fun summer. –Jenna

If you have a special story about a very special dog in need of a good home, please let me know. Our dog in need of home this month is Eva. Five months ago, a woman who feeds and rescues cats found Eva on the streets of the South Bronx. The dog had a litter and then been abandoned. Ana "the cat lady", saved Eva's life, brought her back to health, got her all her shots, and is now trying to find her a very good home. This is a fabulous dog, and all that have met her are amazed at how friendly and beautiful she is. But so far, no one has qualified as having the right situation for Eva. She's an American Pit Bull Terrier- all white- 1 1/2 y.o., & spayed. She knows sit, down, come, fetch and plays hide and seek. The ideal home would be a family or individual with another big dog for her to play with. A fenced yard or large property where she can run would be ideal. Eva is very social and needs a place where she will have human or canine companionship, and not be left alone for long stretches of time. Perhaps you or someone you know would like to adopt her. If so, please contact Melanie Coronetz at 212-369-0758. After June 28 call - 631-749-1294.

Calcium Leading Aide To Ease Symptoms Of PMS

Women across the country will be glad to know that the easy-to-attain mineral calcium has once again been proven the most effective natural aide to ease symptoms of Premenstrual syndrome (PMS). A new study in the American Journal of the College of Nutrition by Susan Thys-Jacob, M.D., confirms that calcium is the leading supplement available to ease and eliminate side effects of PMS including cramps, water retention, mood swings, and cravings. Previous studies have shown that 1,200 mg of calcium per day will results in a nearly 50 percent decrease in PMS symptoms.

"The important aspect of this paper is the existing scientific evidence connecting a variety of micronutrients to the menstrual cycle," says Dr. Thys-Jacobs, attending physician and director of the Osteoporosis Center at St. Lukes-Roosevelt Hospital Center. "The strongest and most convincing evidence to date links a lack of calcium with incidences of Premenstrual syndrome. Women can easily add the necessary calcium to their diets by increasing their intake of dairy products and green vegetables and by taking a calcium supplement such as TUMS, which was used in this study."

This study follows another recent study by Dr. Thys-Jacobs demonstrating calcium's possible link to Polycystic ovary syndrome (PCO). This study, published in the Journal, Steroids, indicates that women who experience a lack of ovulation due to PCO may be able to control their reproductive and menstrual dysfunction by increasing their calcium and Vitamin D intake. Evidence of the study points to the critical role of calcium in the development of eggs.

Polycystic ovary syndrome, which is associated with irregular ovulation, is the second most common endocrine disorder among women (PMS being the first). The condition involves an overproduction of male hormones in women. A polycystic ovary also may contain cysts formed by unreleased eggs before maturation (called oocytes). Besides lack of menstruation, PCO is often characterized by infertility, acne, and obesity.

The study also indicates that abnormally low levels of calcium could be responsible for lack of ovulation, manifesting as the reproductive and menstrual disturbances that characterize PCO syndrome.

"While this study was small and specific," said Dr. Thys Jacobs, "the results yielded enough evidence to pursue calcium's influence on PCO on a larger scale. Further studies will help determine the precise roles of calcium and vitamin D in the egg abnormalities observed in this syndrome."

Women who suffer from PCO or PMS should ask their doctors if they might benefit from increasing their calcium intake to help alleviate symptoms. A woman should first try to get adequate calcium through calcium-rich foods, such as dairy products, broccoli or fortified orange juice. If she can't get enough calcium through food alone, she should consider taking calcium supplements, such as TUMS, which are an inexpensive and easy-to-take method for boosting calcium levels.

The second nine has more elevation changes to it than the front. The tenth hole is a 315 yard uphill dogleg right A large tree juts out 170 yards on the left side. The last 140 yards has you looking at a side hill, uphill lie. The green is long front to back with a pair of traps front, left and front right. The eleventh hole is a 500- yard par S uphill for the first 280 yards with a fairway bunker sitting on the top of the hill on the right. There is more send on the left side about 120 yards from the green. The green slopes right to left uphill and has a trap covering the left front of the green. Twelve is a narrow, straight away 340- yard par 4 with a fairway bunker located on the left side 175 yards out. The entire hole is downhill. The green slopes right to left and only has one trap in the left front. If you are sitting thirty yards in front of the green you will be looking uphill at it because of the depression at the base of the fairway. Thirteen Is a neat slightly uphill 173-yard par three surrounded by traps on the left and right and also the right front. When you walk up to the green, surprise! It's multi-tiered. Depending on the pin placement, the first putt could become a real nightmare. Number fourteen is a long 410- yard par4 with a ball-hawking fairway bunker 210 yards on the left side. The tee box is nicely elevated and the fairway continues downhill for the first half. From 150 yards out you are looking at a large green that slopes uphill left to right and has a massive trap right front that leaves little room for a bump and run shot. Fifteen is a $33-yard dogleg at par 4 with a fairway bunker 150 yards down the right side hugging the tree line. The bend to the right starts 190 yards out on the left side of the fairway. The idea here is to clear the trap or land just to the left of it. From the trap there is only 160 yards straight in with sand bordering the green left an4 right front. The sixteenth hole is 155 yards all uphill. This par three plays a little shorter than.that so adding a club is unnecessary. The green has one lone trap right front. The back of the green continues uphill whereas the left half slopes away to your left. Seventeen is the longest par 4 at 427 yards and is the number 2-handicap hole on the course. The hole is ranked in the top 150 toughest holes for public courses. The tee box is elevated and looks out to a slight dogleg left and a nasty fairway bunker lurking 210 yards down the left side. For the big hitters, the trees are only 250 yards out on the right side. After our friendly fairway bunker you still have 200 plus yards to an elevated green that slopes uphill right to left. One small trap sits to the lower left of the green. A bogey on this hole is a very decent score. The finishing hole is the number 8- handicap, but is the longest hole on the course at 541 yards. This par 5 opens up to the right, but has a fairway bunker 185 yards down the left side. Your second shot will place you at the bend in the fairway that leads you to slightly to the left. Your last 160 yards has you looking at a moderate sized green that slopes upward from front to back. Sand traps sit right front, right rear,,and left rear guarding the green from birdies amid pars.

Playing Spring Lake is truly a challenge. The condition, layout, and imagination make it well worth $36 for walkers. Until next time, hit 'em straight.

POLICE BLOTTER

A 1990 Chevrolet was travelling north on Route 114 when it suddenly hit a tree. The driver, Olga Perodin, 53, gave a Sag Harbor post office box as her address, said the brakes temporarily failed, causing the accident.

Another Chevrolet, this one a 2000 Suburban, was travelling on Industrial Road in Montauk. The driver, George Bernacchia, 46, of Yonkers, said the truck suddenly rolled over for some unknown reason, coming to rest upside down. According to police, the skid marks indicate that the truck veered into the oncoming lane, then abruptly swerved back, flipping over in the process. Bernacchia was treated at Southampton Hospital for lacerations. He was charged with driving while intoxicated.

An unknown intruder entered a home on North Bay Lane in East Hampton. Nothing was stolen but the interloper watched television, listened to some CDs, rearranged the furniture and left a surprise in the toilet. The only damage was to a coffee table which was used as an ashtray.

Also in East Hampton, a residence on Amy's Court was broken into. The thief again used the bathroom, and also drank a glass of water. This time there was $20 missing from the dining room table.

* * *

A Montauk residence returned after an eight-month absence to find her door lock tampered with, as well as a shower door and a storm door window. There was also a mysterious bag of grass clippings on the lawn.

* * *

A Montauk man discovered his 1981 Chevrolet van missing from his South Front Street property. The van had been left there for seven months and vanished sometime in that time frame. The van was valued at $200.

Thirty goldfish and three Koi fish were kidnapped from a Sag Harbor fish pond. The Bayview Drive West resident discovered the filched fish when she went to feed them on a Friday morning. The fish are valued at $300.

* * *

Two women were arrested for disorderly conduct at Tiana Beach in East Quogue. The women, from Sound Beach and Port Jefferson, were sexually groping each other on the hood of a car.

Also at Tiana Beach, a man, also from Port Jefferson, was also arrested for disorderly conduct for performing oral sex on a woman. According to police, people actually left the area, offended by the action. The man was also charged with an open container violation. The woman was not charged with anything.

In Sag Harbor, a Glover Street resident reported the theft of an apparently very special fiberglass step ladder. The ladder was valued at $500.

Dan's LETTERS

WONDERING ABOUT EFFLUVIA
Dear Dan,

I thought I'd drop you a note to let you know how happy Dan's Papers made a group of us at the Evelyn Lauder Breast Center.

I have chemo every Wednesday. I picked up your paper, my mother read your story about the prom. You used the word, "effluvia." A group of us in the waiting room of this East 64th Street center could not figure out what that word meant. (There is a large cross section of people there.)

It was funny to see women, some tired, some weak getting involved in the conversation.

Thank you for making us have a good time. I can't wait for this week's issue.

You're great Dan, thank you.

WHEN IS BATTER UP?
Dear Dan,

I was wondering if a date has yet been selected for the Annual Artists and Writers softball game? Thank you for any help in this matter. And I love reading Dan's Papers whenever I'm in Quogue.

BAD IMPRESSION
Dear Dan,

It's a cool dreary day so I'm lingering over my coffee, not really rushing to get into my chores for the day. I decide to go through the copy of Dan's Papers I brought home from a visit to my daughter in Mattituck. I stop at the page "Cell Phone Horror" and proceed to read it because I sort of get the feeling of the story to be, and I'm not disappointed!

It displays the attitude of cell phone users, "if you don't like it, it's too bad, I'm the one that's 'in,' not you." I can't believe that you told your son not to leave a tip because the young lady stuck to her guns and asked you to leave in essence because of the phone.

What kind of impression are you giving your sons, because someone doesn't accede to their every wish, you'll show them a thing or two. You're not getting any younger and what you should have done was apologize in front of your sons and show them to follow the rules however much you dislike them. A minute or two without your phone doesn't make a damn difference. What goes 'round, comes 'round. Start a legacy of honesty, compassion and understanding. I might remember you for that, not for the story I just read.

SUPPORT FOR EWING
Dear Dan,

I am writing in response to Dan Rattiner's article, "Patrick Ewing We Love You But Enough Is Enough" in the June 9th issue of your paper. As a long time supporter of the Knicks and a fan of professional basketball, I can't help but to disagree with your comment that the Knicks center should retire from professional basketball.

From the moment the Georgetown Alumnus was drafted first by the Knicks in 1985, he brought credibility and respect to a franchise that had been beleaguered through the late seventies and early eighties. Ewing has given one hundred percent of his effort throughout the years and has played through several career-threatening injuries. Unlike other Knick greats like Walt Frazier and Willis Reed, Patrick Ewing never received the respect of the New York fans. This is due in part to Ewing's lack of a championship ring, an award won twice by the tandem of Frazier and Reed. Unlike the great Knick teams of the early seventies, today's Knicks are not a great team in that they lack the chemistry needed to excel in today's NBA.

When told earlier in the year that his role in the Knick's offence would decrease, thus handing the brunt of the offence to Allan Houston and Latrell Spreewell, Ewing agreed without argument, under the assumption this would give the Knicks their best chance to win an NBA title. Since the recent playoff loss to the Indiana Pacers, much of the blame has shifted onto the broad shoulders of Ewing, despite his taking a diminished role in the offence. This is simply unfair. Ewing provided some much needed rebounding and defense for the Knicks who lack the height and size of the Pacers throughout the lineup.

The recent attack of Patrick Ewing is unfair and unwarranted. When looking to shift the blame of a loss on a single player, look no further than the Knicks only allstar, Allan Houston. Houston's futility both offensively and defensively nearly cost the Knicks the series in Miami and eventually was the cause of their demise in Indiana. Patrick can still be effective as a role player and an occasional scorer, and he has accepted this role. Now that Ewing has accepted this, it is only fair that we, the fans, expect the new Patrick Ewing, not the dominant center of the late eighties and nineties.
